Truman Asks $10 Billion in Arms; Hits Hoarding; First Reserves Called Up; Guard Units to Follow; New Weapons Smash 8 Red Tanks at Taejon

Fresh GIs Pour North As Lull Ends In Kum Area

Rocket Launchers Stop His Vehicles As Enemy Attempts A Major Attack

United States Advanced Headquarters in Korea (Thursday), July 20 (AP).—North Korean forces launched a major attack against American defenders at Taejon today and lost eight tanks to new American 3.5-inch rockets.

An advanced headquarters spokesman raised the number of tanks blasted out of the battle by the big new American rocket-launchers from seven to eight as front line reports trickled in. Earlier reports had said all seven tanks that spearheaded the attack had been knocked out. The later report did not specify that no more than eight tanks were involved.

With the western front suddenly aflame again after a three-day lull, two divisions of American troops, newly landed in Korea, rushed west and northwest from the east coast to safeguard allied supply lines to the front.

The fresh Red attack was against the new positions of the United States Twenty-fourth Division north and west of Taejon. Exactly where the Communists hit was not disclosed in field dispatches.

Use of the 3.5-inch launchers against these tanks was the first reported. The 3.5-inch is one of the newer American recoilless weapons.

The Red tanks were described as mediums. (Presumably this meant 34-ton Russian-made tanks which the North Koreans have had in numbers for the Korean war.)

This was the first report of a Communist tank attack since the Reds crashed across the Kum River Sunday night and by sheer weight of numbers forced the Twenty-fourth back from its river defense line. The Reds had succeeded in getting a few tanks across but these had been shot

Bills 'Freezing' Men In Armed Forces And Lifting Ceilings On Personnel Offered

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Department of Defense yesterday announced that selected reservists will be immediately ordered to active duty in limited numbers and mapped plans for calling in National Guard and Reserve units.

Acting swiftly under authority to make involuntary recalls just granted by President Truman, the armed forces began issuing orders to Reserve officers and enlisted men required to "meet the situation in Korea."

There was no official word of impending calls of National Guard and Reserve units, but they are expected soon. The latter will come first, officials indicated, as several problems dealing with the State forces are as yet unsettled—though President Truman yesterday authorized mobilization of the Guard as well as the Reserve.

Authoritative sources said present plans provide for bringing in the Guard in regimental combat team size or smaller units—not whole divisions. Officials want to avoid putting too heavy a burden on particular States under the partial mobilization, such as would happen if six or eight divisions were called.

Plans are afoot within the Navy Department, it is understood, to call in quickly some 13 Naval Aviation Reserve squadrons. There was no word as to whether any of the local "Week-End Warrior" air units attached to the Anacostia reserve base are in the first group. There are close to 250 such squadrons.

The Washington Post also learned that legislation is being prepared at the Pentagon for quick submission to Congress which will reenact the wartime law granting family allowances for enlisted men. It may be confined to reservists called into service.

Members of Congress and Defense chiefs feel that it is hardly fair to exempt men of draft age who have dependents and then call up National Guard corporals and Naval Reserve seamen with similar responsibilities. It was said that such legislation will be rushed through before any large numbers of Guardsmen or Reservists are called.

But though the initial Reserve calls now in process are "limited" and "selective" and largely confined to individuals, it was clear that this was only the beginning.

President Truman made it plain that the expansion of our armed forces fell into two programs—first to quickly provide the men needed in Korea and second, a substantial additional increase required to meet the "world situation." Yesterday's Defense Department announcement said the immediate calls are to take care of Korea.

Bills Are Introduced

Meanwhile on Capitol Hill, legislation was introduced by Chairman Millard Tydings, (D., Md.) and Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the Senate and Houses Armed Services Committee at the request of Penagon chiefs to:

1. Empower the President to hold in service for another year of service all enlisted men whose terms

Red Chance of Victory Lost, MacArthur Assures America

Tokyo, Thursday, July 20 (AP).—General MacArthur said today North Korean forces have lost their chance for victory. His communique said:

"With the deployment in Korea of major elements of the Eighth Army now accomplished the first phase of the campaign has ended and with it the chance for victory by the North Korean forces."

MacArthur said the Communist opportunity for victory depended upon speedy capture of all South Korea once Red forces crashed through the Han River lines south of Seoul. He added:

"This chance he (the enemy) has now lost through the extraordinary speed with which the Eighth Army has been deployed from Japan to stem his rush.

"The desperate decision to throw in piecemeal American elements as they arrived by every available means of transportation from Japan was the only hope to save the situation. The skill and valor thereafter displayed in successive holding actions by the ground forces together with rapid air and naval support checked the Reds and forced them to adopt costly frontal attacks."

MacArthur said victory seemed within Communist grasp when the South Korean line along the Han River cracked and tank-led Red columns poured down the open highway leading to the tip of South Korea.

Runs on Food Stores Foolish, President Advises Housewives

President Truman told the American housewife last night that there was plenty of food in the United States and that hoarding food was "foolish and selfish."

In a talk to the people, which was largely a plain-language version of his earlier message to Congress, Mr. Truman reviewed the Korean situation and the world crisis in general.

He said it was "a time for all of us to pitch in and work together," and added:

"I have been sorry to hear that some people have fallen victim to rumors in the last week or two, and have been buying up various things they have heard would be scarce.

"This is foolish—I say it's foolish. And it is selfish, because hoarding results in entirely unnecessary local shortages.

Plenty of Food in Country

"Hoarding food is especially foolish. There is plenty of food in this country. I have read that there have been runs on sugar in some cities. That is perfectly ridiculous. We now have more sugar available than ever before. There are ample supplies of our other basic foods also.

"I sincerely hope that every American housewife will keep this in mind when she does her daily shopping.

"If I had thought that we were actually threatened by shortages of essential consumer goods, I should have recommended that price control and rationing be immediately instituted. But there is no immediate threat. We have to fear only those shortages which we ourselves artificially create.

"Every businessman who is trying to profiteer in time of national danger—every person who is selfishly trying to get more than his neighbor—is doing just exactly the thing that any enemy of this country would want him to do.

"If prices should rise unduly because of excessive buying or speculation. I know our people will want the Government to take action, and I will not hesitate to recommend rationing and price control."

The Chief Executive delivered his talk in the movie projection room of the White House, and it was broadcast by all American radio and television networks. The Voice of America and the British Broadcasting Corporation also arranged to beam his words round the globe.

Cabinet officers and a number of other officials were invited to the White House to hear Mr. Truman's talk at first hand.

The President elaborated somewhat on what he had told Congress about taxation by saying that "substantial increases in taxes" would be needed to buy additional arms and to act as a safeguard against inflation.

He had more to say about the Soviet Union than he had said earlier to Congress, but he still refrained from blaming her di-

Truman Held Likely to Ask Billions More

Proposed Controls Expected to Extend Further and Faster

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

President Truman's decision to ask for 10 billion dollars—a top-limit figure in current estimates—means he is planning to ask for much more money in the next few months, Administration experts believe.

On the basis of his action, they suspect that by early 1951, defense spending increases will be nearer 20 billion dollars than 10 billion.

These sources, close to the White House, interpret his choice of a top figure for his initial estimate (suggestions earlier had been about five billions) as a sign he sees the current crisis as much more than just a case of Korea. It shows he is plainly convinced that a swift, determined and very large defense program is essential.

First estimates of defense needs presented to the White House 10 days ago called for a new outlay of only about two billion. Since then estimates have moved steadily upward. That the President sanctioned the high figure shows the trend of events—and of his thinking.

The present 10 billion dollars, therefore, appears to be only a starter.

Furthermore, official sources point out, Mr. Truman's message itself indicates that two other new requests will be made for funds over and above the 10 billion.

One is more money for stockpiling some 60-odd items on the list of strategic materials.

The other, much larger, will be a new supplemental appropriation for military aid to nations abroad. Yesterday Congress finished action on an authorization for $1,222,500,000 for this purpose. The President is believed ready to ask for much more, and to do it in a few months. He probably will not wait until next January, as had hitherto been supposed.

Steadily Wider Application

All this means, Washington economists believe, that the control program Mr. Truman proposed yesterday will have steadily wider application. It will probably have to extend further and faster than would now appear.

Meantime, from the President's messages to Congress and the Na-

President Seeks Tax Hike, Priority Rule; May Call for Price Rein, Rations Later

(Mr. Truman's Text, Page 8)

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman, in a bold answer to communism's drawn sword, asked Congress yesterday to bolster the armed strength of the United States and its Allies and friends throughout the world.

"The free nations face a world-wide threat," Mr. Truman told the American people in a broadcast last night. "It must be met with a world-wide defense."

He submitted to Congress a program that promised to have an impact on this Nation—its economy, its way of living—that would be felt for years to come.

It called for vast appropriations (10 billion dollars as a starter), the calling up of the National Guard and the drafting of Americans without limit, higher taxes ("substantial increases," Mr. Truman said last night), power to establish priorities and allocate materials for the armed forces, restraints on private building, controls on consumer credit and commodity speculation, and later on, if a sharp rise in prices makes it necessary, price control and rationing.

Mr. Truman told Congress that the outbreak in Korea might be followed by "armed aggression . . . in other areas," and pointed out that this and like-minded countries, through the United Nations, had made it clear that such aggression would be met by force.

He warned Stalin and his henchmen, without using names, that new aggression by international communism "might well strain to the breaking point the fabric of world peace." This was another way of saying that it was up to them whether there was to be a World War III.

The Chief Executive, in making his recommendations, looked far beyond the fighting in Korea, where Americans are trying to throw back Communist troops that attacked from the north. He said that arms expenditures for the United States and its Allies would

3 Cases Lift Area Polio Total to 43, 24 of Them in City

Three new poliomyelitis cases were reported in the Washington area yesterday, bringing the total for the year to 43.

Two of the victims are District residents, bringing the city's 1950 total to 24 cases, as compared with six cases for the same period in 1949.

The new Washington cases were reported by the District Health Department as a 3-year-old boy living in the 1900 block of First st. nw., admitted to Children's Hospital July 14, and an 8-year-old boy living in the 5300 block of Broad Branch rd. nw., admitted to Children's Hospital July 15.

The third case, reported by the Prince Georges County Health Department, is described as an 8-year-old boy living in the 3100 block of Lancer pl., Hyattsville, admitted to Children's Hospital July 18. This is the county's sixth case this year.

Truman Seeks To Calm Fears Over Formosa

No-Annexation Pledge Might Keep Chinese Out of Korea

President Truman's reference to Formosa in his message yesterday was his first attempt to reassure Communist China and keep her from intervening in the Korean war.

It was an indirect message to the Chinese Communists, telling them that they had not the slightest reason to fear an American annexation of Formosa.

Speeches, broadcasts and diplomatic reports from within China have suggested a belief among the leaders there that the United States really intended to make the island American territory.

A furious propaganda campaign has been launched in China against

Quick Action on Call

Congress Orders Top Priority On Truman Control Measures

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Congress yesterday responded quickly to the President's call for emergency defense legislation by ordering top priority for his military and economic control measures.

Routine reading of the message by a clerk was greeted with standing applause in the House. The Senate listened poker-faced, but a predominant majority commented favorably off the floor.

Some GOP leaders complained that the powers sought were too broad and demanded "close scrutiny" of each control measure. After a meeting of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, Chairman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said the authority asked by the President "goes beyond any necessity we know at the moment."

But a number of others in both parties protested just as vehemently that the program was "too moderate" and should lean more in the direction of "total mobilization."

There were some audible gasps in the packed galleries of the House, however, when the clerk read the President's request for 10 billion dollars.

Brannan Asks What to Do

Surplus Food About to Spoil As Prices in U. S. Skyrocket

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

American housewives, plagued by skyrocketing prices for food, will be astonished to learn that Uncle Sam has hundreds of millions of dollars worth about to spoil and doesn't know what to do with it.

The situation is so serious, Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan has appealed to Congress for help. In response, Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.) of the House Agriculture Committee has called Brannan before that group Monday.

Brannan on June 29 wrote Cooley and Acting Chairman Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) of the Senate Agriculture Committee asking Congressional guidance in disposing of Government-owned surpluses. Cooley released the letter last night along with announcement of Monday's meeting.

Brannan's letter virtually told Congress that (1) it had forced him to buy tremendous stocks of perishable commodities in order to maintain high farm prices, and (2) it didn't furnish him any method of getting rid of them.

On Page 3 of his letter Brannan summarized the amazing extent of Government holdings of high-priced foodstuffs as follows:

"There are now in the possession of CCC (Commodity Credit Corporation) approximately one pound of butter, two and one-half pounds of dried milk, almost half a pound of cheese and two dozen shell eggs (in dried form) for every man, woman and child in the United States.

"None of these commodities has been allowed to spoil. There is no

Truman Asks Right to Raise Top-Bracket Civil Service Pay

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The President yesterday asked Congress to give him the authority to boost the salaries of top-bracket civil servants, and to set aside the ceiling law which limits the number of employes each Federal agency may have.

He made his requests in the Defense Production Bill of 1950 which would give him wide powers to mobilize the Nation to fight the Korean war.

Specifically, the President wants Congress to erase its 400 limitation on the number of jobs that can be allocated to the three top classified grades. In approving the reclassification act a year ago, Congress directed that no more than 300 jobs could be allocated in Grade 16 ($11,200 to $12,000); 75 in Grade 17 ($12,200 to $13,000)

Go-Ahead on Area Projects Planned—for the Present

By Sam Zagonia and Richard Lyons

Governmental heads — District, county and Federal agency—indicated last night they will go ahead with principal construction projects in Greater Washington—at least for the present.

This was the general view of officials after they had studied the President's cut-down-on-building order. Several stressed, however, that their plans could easily be overruled if a review of individual projects is ordered by the Chief Executive.

The District Commissioners will meet today at 10 a. m. with department heads involved in construction jobs to review the building program. Since the fiscal year's budget was signed only Tuesday, contracts have not been let for new city projects as yet.

Liberty Bell Will Be Presented To District Today

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder will participate in a ceremony today at noon marking presentation of a Liberty Bell replica to the District of Columbia.

The program will be held on the front steps of the District Building where the replica, one of 53 given by the Treasury Department to the States and Territories, is now resting.

The bell will be presented by E. C. Baltz, chairman of the District Savings Bond Division, to the Commissioners. John Russell Young, board president, will accept the bell.

Others on the program include the Metropolitan Police Band, which will play a half-hour before the presentation, Father Gilbert V. Hartke, head of the speech and drama department, Catholic University, who will deliver the invocation and Miss Marian Klatta, Loew's Capitol Theater singer. Theodore Granik, chairman of the NBC Forum of the Air, will be master of ceremonies.

Last week The Washington Post awarded a $25 savings bond to Mrs. Mary D. Panzer, 11 Wilson la., Bethesda, for her letter suggesting the triangle in front of the District Building as the site for the bell. The Post forwarded Mrs. Panzer's suggestion to the Commissioners for their consideration.

Buying Spree in U. S. Resumes After Lull

America's Nation-wide buying spree that had showed some evidence of subsiding Tuesday broke out again yesterday as President Truman called for huge new defense spending.

From one end of the country to the other reports reached Washington last night of runs on pepper, sugar, nylons, tires, automobiles, coffee and scores of other items that were scarce during recent war years.

Commodities went upon the various exchanges, with traders attributing the trend to war scare buying and an appraisal of Mr. Truman's program as being inflationary in effect.

Traders and merchants generally paid little attention to the President's threat to ask for price controls if they become necessary.

'Frenzied Steel Market'

Housewives and car drivers were not alone in their panicky buying. Businessmen were catching the fever. The Iron Age, magazine of the steel trade, reported that "fear that allocations will shortly push back civilian orders is causing one of the most frenzied steel markets since the early days of 1941."

Some steel consumers "are approaching steel sales executives with Government orders and asking for extra tonnage over their normal allotment," the paper said, and added:

"So far they have not been successful. Since almost all products are on allotment any plus tonnages would have to be taken out of other customers' allotment. Who to cut, and how much, poses an impossible problem. Most Government orders they have been shown to date are normal, everyday orders, not related to any crisis."

Here are yesterday's price gyrations as reported from the Nation's markets:

1. After sagging early from $1.25 to $2.25 a bale, cotton jumped sharply after the President's message, to close $1.85 to $5 a bale higher.

2. A wave of gasoline ice rises spread as Standard Oil of Kentucky boosted prices four tenths of a gallon. Esso Standard made a similar increase Tuesday from Maine to Louisiana.

3. War stocks rose sharply. Aircraft, steel, railroad and chemical issues were in heavy demand. Rails topped the previous high reached November 4, 1948. Net gains ranged to $3 or more a share in aircrafts and oils. Steel were up $1 to $2 a share. Rails averaged a gain of 65 cents, bringing their two-day rise to $2.20.

Cocoa Futures Dip

4. Going against the trend green coffee futures ranged 1.3 to 2 cents a pound lower. Cocoa futures declined .45 to .56 of a cent a pound.

5. Rubber futures in New York were up one-half to .85 of a cent a pound.

6. Both hogs and cattle were steady to 25 and 50 cents per 100 pounds lower. But retail meat prices went up again.

7. Sugar went up slightly. Wheat gained as much as a cent a bushel. Soybeans rallied after early declines.

Tuesday's action by the Commodity Credit Corporation to stabilize rising prices of cotton by announcing that 4,320,000 bales stored under price support programs will be kept available for market sales attracted much Congressional attention.

The action showed that CCC has great power to prevent runaway prices for many food products. It does not need special authority to place subs on markets for such commodities as wheat, corn, cotton dry beans, peas, butter, flaxseed, linseed oil, cottonseed oil, cheese, dried milk and dried eggs.

By offering these products at set prices, the Government could pretty well fix the top limit of prices, at least as long as its present huge stores of them lasted.

Woman Buys 2 Orders To Beat 'Hoarders'

A story, alleged to originate in New York City, was going the rounds of the Department of Agriculture yesterday:

A woman was asked why she had bought two large orders of sugar from adjacent grocery stores, replied: "I'm just trying to get some before the hoarders buy it all."

VA Housing Loan Program Goes in Effect

By The Associated Press

The Veterans' Administration is going into the direct home loan business today with 150 million dollars on tap.

The new loan program was authorized by a delayed-fuse provision of the general housing aid bill enacted earlier this year.

In some respects, at least, it appeared to clash with the Administration's new crackdown on easy-term housing credit, set out in a White House order Tuesday and a reference in President Truman's preparedness message yesterday about the desirability of reducing the demand for critical materials required for the production of military equipment.

Veterans Administrator Carl R. Gray, jr., said the direct loans will be available in all but the most heavily populated areas.

Gray also announced that hereafter veterans must make cash down payments of at least 5 percent of the purchase price or construction cost.

The new loans may not exceed $10,000. In addition to proving he is unable to get 4 percent financing elsewhere, the veterans must:

1. Be a satisfactory credit risk, with monthly payments on his mortgage bearing a proper relationship to his income.

2. Not have used any part of his GI loan guaranty entitlement.

Surplus Food About to Spoil

immedaite threat of spoilage. However, such a fortunate condition cannot be expected to continue indefinitely."

Brannan's letter revealed another startling fact. That is that the potato program, which many members of Congress had recently stated was solved by virtual removal of supports, is far from that. Brannan predicted that the 1950 crop of potatoes—which won't reach the peak until next spring "may cost the Commodity Credit Corporation as much as 75 million dollars."

This prediction was made a day before the 1949 crop year ended on June 30. Total losses on potatoes for the year ending last month still have not been figured, but most estimates are about 85 million dollars.

If Brannan's estimate for 1950 is correct, potatoes alone will have cost almost 400 million dollars in only three years and about 600 million—more than the cost of several battleships—altogether.

After reciting two long, single-spaced pages of reports of the danger of huge losses from soilage now faced by the Government, Brannan added:

"I hope you will thoroughly understand that the foregoing is submitted to you as a part of my obligation to keep the Congress fully advised of important developments in the agricultural area."

Building 'Go-Ahead' Planned

tion is supported by governmental officials for two reasons:

1. Many projects have been started and materials set aside for them. Cancellations are expensive, therefore.

2. Several planned projects are the first major ones since World War II, and sponsors consider them "mighty essential."

A spokesman for General Services Administration, which is supervising the erection of 83 million dollars' worth of buildings in the area, said these are "well under way and under contract."

"In order to cancel, we have to pay all of the contractor's costs," he emphasized.

The Big Four of the GSA here are the General Accounting Office, 25 million; Clinical Center of the National Institutes of Health at Bethesda, 40 million; Federal Courts Building, 13 million and the White House renovation, five million.

The District government is principally interested in the $1,405,000 start on an eventual 47-million-dollar water system expansion program and the beginning of the long-awaited East Capitol st. bridge. The former was considered so urgent Congress authorized the city to borrow for it.

Top city officials emphasized the need for the water program. The District "will run into serious trouble in a few years if the intake and distribution systems are not enlarged," one warned.

In addition to the GSA projects, another Federal agency, the Veterans Administration, is proceeding with plans for a 7-million-dollar hospital on the Soldiers' Home tract. The 500-bed installation will be located on a 43-acre corner of the Northwest land. The VA has funds earmarked for the building, a spokesman said.

In Montgomery County, Md., Joseph Kordella, engineer in the Public Works Department, said present plans call for carrying out the county's program for the current fiscal year. Bids will be asked shortly on some; none have been started. They include $7,394,700 for school building.

In Prince Georges County, Md., Thomas S. Gwynn, jr., Director of School Planning, said no charge is contemplated presently on 12 school projects now under construction at a cost of $7,187,701. No other governmental building is scheduled for the county.

In Virginia, Alexandria City Manager W. Guy Ancell said the city has already started on a $10,000 dog pound and will shortly begin a $70,000 swimming pool for Negroes. "We're going just as far as we can on these," he said.

In Fairfax County, Va., School Superintendent W. T. Woodson said that although the school board has not discussed the Truman statement, "Our school situation is critical." An addition to the Annandale School is under way and the board has a two-year, 12-million-dollar building program planned.

Falls Church, Va., Mayor albert M. Orme said the city's most important building item is schools. The school board is now preparing final plans for a new high school and primary school. How these will be affected by the President's statement, he could not say.

In nearby Maryland, this includes paving with bituminous concrete of state road 3 in Prince Georges County, from Rosaryville north, 88 percent completed.

Publishing of Notes Ends Peace Efforts

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

India's first effort at a "peaceful" settlement of the Korean war ended yesterday with the publication of notes between Prime Minister Nehru and Secretary Acheson.

The notes showed a respectful disagreement between the two men over the wisdom of seating Communist China in the United Nations at the present time.

Acheson reminded Nehru, in a note delivered Tuesday, that the war could be stopped "tomorrow" if "a small minority" of the U. N. obeyed the Security Council's orders and used their influence to restore peace.

He argued that the question of seating Communist China should be settled on its own merits and "should not be dictated by unlawful aggression or by any other conduct which would subject the United Nations to coercion and duress."

But Nehru still maintained, in a new note delivered yesterday, that the prompt seating of Communist China "would create a suitable atmosphere for the peaceful solution of the Korean problem."

No Reply To Second Note

"I do not think that the admission of China now," he wrote, "would be an encouragement of aggression."

(A London dispatch by the Associated Press said Russia had announced that her price for Korean peace still is unchanged—the admission of Communist China to the United Nations.)

(The Moscow radio broadcast a dispatch from the official Soviet News Agency Tass giving the Russian version of talks between Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Sir David Kelly, British Ambassador to Moscow.)

[There was only one difference between the Soviet position as outlined by Gromyko and Prime Minister Stalin's earlier note on the subject to Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

[Tass quoted Gromyko as telling Kelly the British proposal for withdrawal of North Korean forces north of the 38th parallel could be discussed by the U. N. security council.

[While the Tass story was ambiguously worded this presumably meant a security council in which Red China was seated. This has been the Soviet position throughout the Korean case.—Editor's note.]

State Department officials indicated that no reply would be made to Nehru's second note, and Nehru was expected to stop his efforts for the time being. An overwhelming majority of the Security Council is believed opposed to seating the Communist Chinese while the Korean war is going on.

The general belief here is that nothing will come of any peace moves until the North Korean troops meet their first real defeat and start to be driven back.

The notes published here yesterday were only those between Nehru and Acheson. There has been no publication in Washington of Nehru's note to Premier Stalin, or of Stalin's reply, which was reported to have approved the seating of the Chinese Communists as a means of restoring peace in Korea.

Nehru sent a second note to Stalin, it was learned yesterday, thanking him in a few lines and describing his reply as "encouraging."

The first of the notes published yesterday was Nehru's to Acheson, dated July 13. It said India's purpose "is to localize the conflict and to facilitate an early peaceful settlement."

Its proposed method was to put Communist China on the Security Council, thus ending the Soviet boycott, and then for the United States, Russia and China, "with the help and cooperation of other peace-loving nations," to find "a basis for terminating the conflict and for a permanent solution of the Korean problem."

Acheson replied on July 18 by saying he was "deeply appreciative of the high purpose" of Nehru's appeal. He wrote that it was a fundamental aim of American policy to help keep peace through the United Nations.

"The United States is, therefore, eager to do all that is proper and possible to preserve and strengthen the United Nations," the Secretary said.

"The purpose of the United States Government and of the American people with respect to Korea is to support by all means at our disposal the determination of the United Nations to restore international peace and security in the area.

"We desire both to prevent the spread of aggression beyond Korea and to end it there—as required by the Security Council of the United Nations."

Without mentioning Russia or her satellites directly, Acheson said it was "painful to realize" that peace could have been restored and lives saved long ago if a small minority in the U. N. had not failed to meet their Charter obligations.

He declared that a breach of peace or an act of aggression was the most serious matter that could confront the U. N.

"We do not believe," he said, "that the termination of aggression from Northern Korea can be contingent in any way upon the determination of other questions which are currently before the United Nations.

No Obstacle to Soviets

"There has not been at any time any obstacle to the full participation by the Soviet Union in the work of the United Nations except by the decision of the Soviet Government itself."

The question of Chinese representation must be decided on its own merits, he went on; a "wide diversity of views" on the question existed now, and the decision "should not be dictated by an unlawful aggression."

Acheson ended by assuring Nehru "of our eagerness to work with you and your great country to establish in the United Nations a means by which the fear of aggression can be permanently lifted from the peoples of the earth."

In Nehru's second note, which Mrs. Pandit handed to Acheson yesterday, he said he recognized that American policy aimed at preserving peace through the U. N.; his suggestion for seating Communist China "was designed to fulfill this policy, not to weaken it."

He recalled that India had been trying to get Communist China seated in the U. N. ever since last December 30, when India recognized the Peking regime. The present renewal of this effort, he said, was made "on its merits" and also in the hope that it would help toward settling the Korean problem.

Red Leaders Of 18 Nations Meet in Berlin

Berlin, July 19 (AP).—Top Communist leaders of Europe and Red China gathered in Berlin tonight for what appeared to be an important Cominform discussion.

Ostensibly these Red representatives from 18 nations came here as foreign guests for the third annual convention of East Germany's Socialist Unity (Communist) Party, which opens Thursday.

But the prominence of the visitors and the fact that many of them were leading lights in the Moscow-directed Cominform suggested that something bigger was afoot.

It was the biggest gathering of Communist leaders since the outbreak of the Korean war. It came at a time when Cominform pressure was being intensified against Premier Marshal Tito's Yugoslavia. Western leaders also have been expecting increased Cominform pressure on Greece.

Palmiro Togliatti of Italy and Jacques Duclos of France were among the arrivals here.

The Soviet delegation consists of M. R. Suslov and P. N. Pospelov. Suslov is secretary of the Russian Communist Party's central committee and is Russia's Cominform delegate.

Other Communist notables were Wang Chia Hsiang of the Chinese Communist Central Committee, Premier Josef Cyrankiewicz and Jakub Berman of Poland's Communist Politburo; Josef Frank of Czechoslovakia, Josef Revai of Hungary, Foreign Minister Mintsche Neitchev of Bugaria and Deputy Premier Vasile Luca of Romania. Britain's Communist Party was represented by Harry Pollitt and Spain by Enrique Lister, Red colonel in the Spanish civil war.

A dispatch from Karlovy Vary (Karlsbad), Czechoslovakia, said Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky had taken a plane yesterday from that health resort, leaving his family behind. He had been on vacation there nearly two months. Speculation in Karlovy Vary was that he might have been called to Moscow because of the international situation.

About 4000 delegates are expected to attend the Socialist Unity convention.

Only last night the United Nations Committee on the Balkans took the unusual step of issuing a formal report to Secretary General Trygve Lie warning that the Cominform may be planning a new attack on Greece.

The committee said "current history" shows that aggression frequently is preceded by propaganda accusing the intended victim of aggressive intentions. It cited a recent declaration in the Cominform Journal by Nicholas Zachariades, Greek Communist rebel leader, that the United States and Britain are expanding Greek armed forces for a contemplated offensive against Bulgaria and Albania.

In the last few days there has been a flurry of notes exchanged by Yugoslavia with Bulgaria and Albania in which each side accused the other of border shootings and raids as parts of an aggressive design.

Remington Asks Specific Grounds In Red Charge

New York, July 19 (AP). — Former Commerce Department Economist William W. Remington today asked the Federal Government on what specific grounds he was accused of being a Communist.

A Federal grand jury indicted him on one charge of perjury last month for denying he ever had been a Communist.

In a motion filed in Federal Court Remington asked such questions as how the Government defined the term "member of the Communist Party." He asked the Government also to list events and acts which, it claims, show he was a party member.

His motion was filed as Judge J. Whitfield Davidson adjourned argument for fixing of a trial date.

United States Attorney Irving H. Saypol said his office would vigorously fight Remington's request for a bill of particulars. Saypol said Remington, in effect, had asked for matters of evidence which should be reserved for the trial.

2 Killed, 7 Missing, 11 Wounded in New Casualty Lists

The Defense Department yesterday issued two Korean war casuality lists showing two Americans killed, eleven wounded, three injured and seven missing.

All the new casualties are Army personnel except two Air Force men. They raised the total American casualties in the fighting to thirty killed, three dead of wounds, 125 wounded, 34 injured and 72 missing.

On yesterday's list:

Killed: Pfc. Wayne O. Meyer, son of Mrs. Pearl Booth, Mansfield, O.; Sgt. Frederick H. Tuttle, husband of Mrs. Dorothy Tuttue, Peekskill, N. Y.

Nicaraguans Alone Offer Ground Help

Lake Success, July 19 (AP).—United Nations forces fighting Communist aggression in Korea are growing slowly, but no combat troops have been formally pledged so far to join American GI's on the battlefield.

United Nations Secretary-General Trygve Lie dispatched an appeal last Friday to 52 of the 59 U. N. members for all help they could give. To date, he has not been pledged one soldier. Only one big power, Britain, appears on the verge of committing troops.

Aid may come from at least three Latin American nations.

In Nicaragua, president Anastiasio Somoza said that nation is ready to supply an armed force. So far, the U. N. has not heard from him officially.

Brazil's National Security Council, meeting under the chairmanship of President Eurico Dutra, agreed today to suggest a reply to the U. N. appeal saying: "The Brazilian Government reiterates its statement that it will give the United Nations aid compatible with the means at its disposal and, in that respect, is ready to seek an understanding with competent organs."

Peron Statement Awaited

The Argentine Foreign Minister, Hipolito Jesus Paz, informed Lie Tuesday Argentina will support U. N. decisions. There are hints President Juan D. Peron's government may make a public statement later this week.

U. N. officials say no formal replies have been received. They add quickly that decisions must be made on the highest governmental levels and the process takes time.

Nationalist China's Chiang Kai-Shek offered early in the war to fly 33,000 trained combat soldiers, complete with equipment, to Korea. But the United States shied away. The United States and the U. N. have told Chiang to take it up with Gen. Douglas MacArthur direct. The United States is said to fear Communist Chinese troops will join the North Koreans if Chiang's men line up beside the South Koreans.

U. N. Force is Favored

The Association for the United Nations, a private civic organization which supports U. N. work, called today for setting up an independent U. N. force with direct enlistments.

It urged the United States Government, in a message to the State Department which also was sent to Lake Success, to submit plans for such a force. Hundreds of persons throughout the world have been reported attempting to enlist as volunteers in a U. N. force.

U. S. Planes Blast Airfield At Pyonggang, Rail Center

An Air Base in Japan, July 19 (U.P.).—United States fighter planes stabbed at the heart of North Korean communications today in a blistering attack on an airfield at the highway and rail center of Pyonggang.

Pilots caimed they destroyed 15 of 22 Communist planes which were parked on the Pyonggang airstrip. They probably destroyed the other seven, they said.

In another air action, American fighter pilots reported they shot down three or four Russian-built Yaks in a fierce dogfight over Taejon, in South Korea. They said they would have bagged the fourth if they had not run out of ammunition.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur said in a communique that these successes brought to 31 the number of enemy planes destroyed since the war began.

In Washington, the Navy said MacArthur had reported that American planes had destroyed or damaged 60 North Korean aircraft in the past two days.

The Washington announcement followed the Navy's third major carrier-based attack on North Korea yesterday. Navy planes attacked Pyonggang and claimed destruction of 25 planes on the ground.

Returning pilots said, however, that half the planes might have been dummies. There have been several reports recently that many of the Red planes reported on the ground were mock-ups.

One F-80 was lost, apparently to enemy ground fire, in the aerial battle over Taejon, the Air Force reported. The plane made a belly landing in a rice field, and the fate of the pilot was unknown.

The North Korean radio claimed in a broadcast from the Communist capital of Pyonggang that the Red air force had downed five American planes in air combat yesterday.

Fifth Air Force F-80s made their first raid north of the Thirty-eighth parallel in their attack on Pyonggang, which straddles a main-line railroad from the North Korean port of Wonsan to the captured South Korean capital of Seoul. It also is a major highway center where roads from Pyonggang to Seoul and all sections of North Korea are linked. Pyonggang is 51 miles south of Wonsan and 65 miles west of the Japan Sea coast.

The F-80 pilots made the 800-mile round-trip to Pyonggang in 2 hours, 25 minutes, including 15 minutes of strafing the target. They had been ordered by Brig. Gen. E. J. Timberlake, jr., vice commander of the Fifth Air Force to make only one pass at the Communist field.

But there was no flak and very little small arms fire, so they decided to keep trying. They made a total of five passes, destroying or damaging every plane they saw.

Indian Suggests Revising Charter Of World Bank

Geneva, July 19 (AP).—An extensive revision of the constitution of the World Bank was urged here today by India's Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar.

Under the Bank's present status, Sir Ramaswami told the United Nations Economic and Social Council, loans are granted only under such exceptional circumstances.

"Any nation asking for a loan," he declared, "has to stand in the dock like an accused and prove such exceptional circumstances.

"I fail to see what exceptional circumstances many of the most needy and most underdeveloped Nations could show to satisfy the chiteria which the Bank has set for itself."

Sir Ramaswami said the Bank was "an institution looked up to by people all over the world," but the constitution of the Bank would need to be extensively liberalized if it wished to maintain such respect.

Belgium Tense On Eve of Repeal Of Ban on Leopold

Brussels, July 19 (U.P.).—Belgium was tense tonight as a special joint session of Parliament prepared to repeal—possibly Thursday—the law barring King Leopold III from the throne.

The anti-Leopold Socialist Party warned it would resort to everything in its power, including a general strike, to force Leopold to abdicate after his return from exile.

The tension was increased by announcement that a mysterious explosion occurred late last night outside the wall of Laeken Palace, where Leopold is expected to stay

Rep. Magee Requests Active War Duty Again

Rep. Clare Magee (D., Mo.) asked the Air Force yesterday for waivers of minor physical imperfections to permit him to go on active duty. He is 51.

Magee told a reporter a physical examination showed an eye and ear are not up to par.

He added: "I'm in good physical condition."

Magee served in the Navy in World War I and in the Army Air Force in World War II.

Yank Patrol Overwhelms Reds, 200-300 Killed or Wounded

At the Taejon Front, July 19. (U.P.).—An American patrol surprised a large Communist force on a road 5 miles north of Taejon today and scored the most lopsided victory of the Korean war.

When the battle was over, 200 to 300 North Korean dead and wounded were strewn over the road.

A patrol headed by Capt. John A. Kearns, Jamaica, N. Y., met the Communist force.

"We hit them head on and threw them back," Kearns said. "Then they attempted to flank us and we called for help."

Another company, under Lieut. Julius Brown, Birmingham, Ala., came up and caught the North Koreans in the middle of their flanking attempt.

"His machinegunners and automatic riflemen just mowed them down," Kearns said.

up by Allied aircraft.

A report of the tank attack from Associated Press Correspondent William R. Moore at Advanced Headquarters gave no indication of its strength.

Newly landed American forces were racing inland from Korea's east coast, bent on keeping the Communists away from the vital port of Pusan and supply lines leading to the front.

The reinforcements—two United States Army divisions—came in at two points, but their arrival was not taken to mean an immediate United Nations counterblow which is thought to be some weeks away. Rather, fresh American forces seemed to be building a barrier against the southern-driving Reds behind which a real offensive could be prepared.

The famed First Cavalry Division landed Tuesday at Pohang, 66 miles north of Pusan—the all-important American supply port. This fast moving outfit now is mechanized and is cavaly only in name. It got ashore and several miles inland without opposition and headed for important roads, possibly both the coastal highways and those farther inland. The Reds were reported making a new move down the Yongju-Andong road-rail route. Fresh United States forces were rushed toward that area.

The Twenty-fifth, known as the Tropic Lightning division came in previously as reinforcements at Pusan. It too may be somewhere in the central sector to hold the roads.

Both the beachhead and the reinforcement landing seemed to fit into earlier reports that the defenders of South Korea were slowly pulling back into a defense perimeter based on Pusan, which could be held with relatively small forces until a major blow could be struck. Pohang looks like an ideal northern anchor for such a perimeter with the added value of serving as alternate supply port to take some of the burden off Pusan's jammed docks.

Although the cavalry division has reported no contact with the Reds the enemy is known to be in the area. Twenty-five miles farther north a Red column which reached Yongdok has been driven back by South Koreans.

The strength of the First Cavalry and Twenty-fifth Divisions was not given but one report that the hell-for-leather cavalry had landed 5000 men brought a reply from MacArthur's headquarters that the figure was "not realistic." At full strength the division would number about 15,000 men.

The Twenty-fifth Division may be on the lines in the Yechon-Andong area where two days ago American artillery began supporting South Korean troops.

If the Twenty-fifth is in that sector it would be adding its strength to South Korean troops in defending inland roads leading south to Taegu and Pusan which the Reds have been driving hard to take and cut the American supply lines from Pusan.

While the First Cavalry, possibly the Twenty-fifth and the South Koreans were striving to cork up vulnerable central avenues leading south, the Twenty-fourth was still slugging it out with the Reds far to the west around Taejon.

Taejon, abandoned but still within United States lines, drew heavy artillery pounding from the Reds. The Nineteenth and Thirty-fourth United States Regiments nevertheless held their lines north of the city. The lull of the last two days was broken first by the artillery and a campaign of infiltration which put some Red troops inside American lines. This was followed by the tank thrust.

Associated Press Correspondent Leif Erickson wrote from an American base in Korea that "the bitter American battle for time . . . is being won. But the time for a real American counteroffensive is not a matter of days. There will be more delaying action but there should not be much more retreat."

The Air Force smashed at enemy troop and tank concentrations at Nonsan southwest of Taejon but the weather was bad and results undetermined.

Fighting crackled in the central sector. Yechon, on the road between Andong and Hamchang, after changing hands several times, is now held by the Reds, MacArthur said in his 12:55 a. m. Thursday (9:55 a. m., Wednesday, EST.) communique. The Reds also were reported moving south along the Hamchang-Sanju road—a road that leads to Taegu through which the Pusan supply line runs.

The landing was made only after 10 days' preparation, believed a record for an amphibious landing, one of the most difficult of military operations. The First Cavalry took all conventional equipment including artillery and bulldozers. There was no mention of tanks but the supplies taken in were described as vast.

Although hampered by poor weather airmen struck where they could. American and Australian bombers and fighters hammered at five bridges in or near Chochiwon, Kongju, Chonan and Ichon—all key points in Red supply routes—on July 18. For that day an aerial bag of six tanks and 55 trucks was claimed. B-29s bombed Seoul's west bridge. Hits were scored but it was too cloudy to tell whether the bridge was knocked out.

American jets downed three of four Russian-made Yak 9 fighters which strafed and bombed American positions around Taejon.

Pilots said they saw pack animals being used to move supplies, indicating the Reds may be running out of trucks or gasoline. The Communist radio said five American planes were shot down by Red fighters Tuesday and claimed 60 of 200 American trucks destroyed by their airmen.

Arms Aid Bill Passes House By 361-1 Vote

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

By a vote of 361 to 1, the House yesterday passed and sent to President Truman the $1,222,500,000 arms bill he asked to strengthen the collective security of non-Communist nations.

Lone vote against the measure was cast by Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP-NY).

Action came less than two hours after the House received the Presidents preparedness message, which signalled a forthcoming request for additional foreign arms funds. This request is generally expected to run into billions of dollars.

The Senate already had approved the second year arms authorization measure by 66 to 0.

Representative Robert F. Rich (R., Pa.) answered "present" when his name was called on yesterday's vote. He had earlier explained that he does not believe the United States can achieve peace by arming other nations.

Yesterday's measure is only an authorization. The actual cash must be provided by separate legislation.

Informed sources on Capitol Hill have indicated the Administration may ask for another five billion dollars in arms aid in addition to the 10 billion in new funds requests for this Nation's military.

Republican leaders said they will scrutinize Mr. Truman's detailed legislative requests on arms aid on their merits and in light of Korean war needs and the central world picture.

The money authorized in the bill would pay for the second year's installment of foreign military aid. The North Atlantic Pact countries would get $1,000,000,000, Greece, Turkey and Iran, $131,500,000, and Korea and the Philippines, $16,000,000.

The bill also authorizes the President to spend up to $75,000,000 in assisting anti-Communist nations of the Far East.

Ho Says He'll Crush U. S. in Indo-China

Saigon, Indo-China, July 19 (AP). Communist-trained Ho Chi Minh today promised that his anti-French Indo-Chinese guerillas would crush "American interventionists" in Indo-China.

In a message read on his secret jungle radio, Ho charged that the United States hoped to take Indo-China from the French. That charge is a familiar Communist accusation.

Ho's forces and the French army have been locked in a stalemated guerilla war for five years.

The broadcast, though not read by Ho, was taken here as contradicting recent rumors that Ho was either dead or had been replaced as leader of the Viet Minh rebels.

Russia and other Communist nations have formally recognized his regime as the government of Indo-China. The United States, Britain and other Western nations have recognized the pro-French government of Bao Dai.

The United States has announced it will extend military and economic aid to Bao Dai and has sent a mission to Indo-China to make a survey.

A French military communique today said French troops have cleaned Ho's Viet Minh forces out of a rich, rice-growing area north of Haiphong, main port of north Indo-China, with "heavy losses" to the guerillas.

Last night a band of 84 guerillas, armed with rifles and machine guns, attacked a police patrol in Cholon—the Chinese sector of Saigon—and were beaten off.

'Must Win'

'Ike' Opposes A-Bomb Use On Korea Foe

San Francisco, July 19 (AP).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower does not believe the atom bomb should be used in the battle for Korea.

"I believe that were I in the middle of this thing, I would avoid using anything that our own people or other peoples might consider inhuman," Eisenhower told reporters at Fresno yesterday on his way here.

"It is imperative that we stand before the world as the champions of decency. I wouldn't want to do anything that might antagonize public opinion in any way."

Eisenhower, the supreme allied commander in Europe in World War II, is president of Columbia University. He and Mrs. Eisenhower are on a vacation trip.

"The Korean battle just doesn't looks like it was deliberately planned as the beginning of a major war," Eisenhower said.

"We've got to win in Korea or we're bound to get smacked somewhere else."

He declared the loss of the Korean campaign would be "the worst that could happen to our hopes of peace."

State Legion Heads To Mobilize for War

Indianapolis, July 19 (U.P.).—National American Legion Commander George N. Craig of Brazil, Ind., today called a special meeting of all State commanders to mobilize the Legion for service in the Korean conflict.

Craig called the meeting, to be held at national headquarters here next Sunday, after consulting an advisory group of legionnaires, including eight past national commanders.

Truman Seeks To Calm China

what is called "the American imperialist aggression on Taiwan (Formosa) and Korea." Like all Communist propaganda campaigns, this one has been violent and abusive in tone.

But some of the few foreign diplomats stationed in Peking believe this campaign also reflects American motives.

They believe that the Chinese Communist leaders saw hidden annexationist designs in President Truman's statement of June 27, which ordered the Seventh Fleet to guard Formosa against attack from the mainland.

The government of India, which recognizes Communist China, has tried in vain to correct such impressions, both through its ambassador in Peking and through statements by Prime Minister Nehru.

On July 7 Nehru said at New Delhi that it was not "correct" to comment that Formosa had been "appropriated" by the Americans. Since then Indian officials here have urged the United States government to clarify its stand. Their advice appears to have been accepted, for President Truman declared flatly yesterday that no annexation was intended.

The Indian Ambassador here, Mrs. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit, said yesterday that she thought the President's statement would be extremely "helpful" in calming the Chinese. The President's message was, of course, cabled to New Delhi, and the ambassador in Peking will be instructed to bring the Formosa section to the special attention of the Chinese leaders.

The British, who have a diplomatic mission in Peking, are expected to tell the Chinese that the status of Formosa is being held "in abeyance" but that no American annexation is intended.

War II Wave Files for 2d Tour of Duty

The Naval Reserve yesterday received its first applicant for the WAVES, a former yeoman, first class, ready to return.

She is Mrs. Lillian C. Anderson, of 249 Oglethorpe st. nw., who in World War II served two-and-a-half years, ending in December, 1945.

Five former enlisted members of the Army Reserve, and 25 officer reservists, also applied at the Potomac River Naval Command.

Eighteen men were sworn in for the Army, six others for the Air Force. Mental tests were given to 42 other applicants, of whom 36 passed and now await "physicals."

The Navy reported five first enlistments; one reenlistment; 11 reservists who voluntarily asked recall to active duty; and 17 applicants, of whom 15, having met other qualifications, will take their physical examinations today.

The Marines reported reenlistment of one former Marine and one reservist volunteering for active duty, who was assigned to Camp Lejeune. It was a "very, very poor day," according to a recruiting sergeant, with only 18 men making inquiries—the lowest number this month.

The Coast Guard reported three enlistments and 11 applicants who passed physical and other qualifying tests.

Thai Army Rift Feared; Cabinet Members Guarded

Bangkok, Thailand, July (U.P.).—Police threw heavy guards around the residences of Thai Cabinet members today as reports spread of rifts among units of the army.

The exact nature of any disturbance expected was not known, but presumably it was of local origin since there has been no serious Communist menace from within the the country.

Premier Phibun Songgram recently relinquished the Finance portfolio to concentrate his attention on varvious branches of the armed forces.

A high official source said known Communist leaders had been arrested and deported. No estimate of Red strength was available, but officials were confident the government could suppress any subversive activity.

Premier Says Burma Hope For U. N. Aid Is Attacked

Rangoon, Burma, July 19 (AP).—Premier Thankin Nu today said Burma is hopeful of United Nations aid if she is attacked. He pledged all possible moral and material help to other member nations in distress.

The premier spoke at a rally held here to celebrate the end of his peace-winthin-one-year program.

Burma's new political program, Thankin Nu said, includes turning the country into a socialist state, avoiding attachment to any power bloc, friendly relations with any country willing to exchange mutual benefits and acceptance of foreign aid from whatever country offers it.

First Reservists Called Back Into Service

expire between now and July 9, 1951. That's the date the present draft law expires. During World War II a similar "freeze" was approved for "the duration and six months."

2. Remove the present 2,005,882-man peace-time ceiling on the armed forces—a step asked by President Truman in his message to Congress yesterday.

The Tydings committee scheduled hearings on the bill for this morning and Vinson called his group to meet tomorrow (Friday). Both groups also were awaiting Pentagon proposals for other changes in the Selective Service law.

There was talk of amending the act to: (1) change the present exemption of veterans with a year's service or more; (2) make deferment rules for men with dependents less liberal; (3) raise the draft age limits—perhaps requiring registrations up to 35 year old men and eligibility for calls up to 28. But this still was talk—with no word from the Pentagon.

The Army, Navy and Air Force announcements of Reserve recalls gave no indication of the numbers involved, and officials declined to expand on President Truman's statement that a 10-billion-dollar expansion of the armed forces will be asked. A detailed program will go to Congress next week, it was said.

But the official statement spoke of calling in only those reservists with "immediately usable skills."

Those called will be "permitted . . . to complete a minimum of one year's service," said the Pentagon.

A joint Army-Air Force statement declared they "will initiate immediately a limited recall of Reserve personnel." Officers and men called, whether on a voluntary or involuntary basis, will be given their present Reserve rank, rather than their lower last active duty grade.

The "greatest current need" for Army Reserve officers—those who may expect calls first—are for medical officers and for engineer and infantry officers of company grade—captain and lower.

"Critical Specialists" Asked

The Air Force said it largely needs individual officers of similar rank. However, "certain critical specialists will be required in higher grades.

"Greatest current need for Air Force officers," it was said, "is for those who have been trained as navigators, bombardiers; communications, radio and radar specialists; medical and dental officers, weather specialists and armament offices. There is also a requirement for a smaller number of officers in most other categories."

Announcing a "selective" recall of reservists, the Navy said:

"Quotas will be filled as far as possible from the Organized Reserve, who are considered to be qualified for active duty, and Fleet Reserve, with members of the Volunteer Reserve not to be recalled involuntarily except as necessary to fill specific quotas not procurable from Organized and Fleet Reserve sources.

"Waves and enlisted retired personnel will not be involuntarily recalled at this time."

Members of the Organized Reserve are those in units which have weekly drills and annual cruises. Fleet Reservists are old-time regulars drawing retainer pay, while Volunteer Reservists make up the remainder of the Navy's 1,096,000 reserves. Some of the latter may be members of groups taking regular drills or lectures.

A Marine Corps spokesman said the Leathernecks will mobilize "certain selected units." The decision as to when and which battalions has not been made.

The Army gave its most urgent enlisted reserve needs as follows: "airborne-trained personnel, electronic, tank and armament maintenance personnel, certain military intelligence, medical, communication, and wire-maintenance technicians, as well as certain engineering and construction specialists in landing-craft operation, camouflage, bridge, road, beach, port and airfield construction."

tr for add 6

Said the Air Force:

"Airmen whose specialties are most urgently required include those with experience as aircraft and engine mechanics, radar and radio specialists, communications personnel, armament specialists, and personnel in the medical fields. As with officer requirements, a smaller number of airmen are also required in other fields."

Officials are still troubled by problems connected with mobilization of the National Guard and one source thought no Guard call would be made for a week or two. The trouble is that all of the Guard's 27 divisions and support units are not wanted now and could not be housed and equipped immediately if they were.

Inasmuch as the Guard are State troops, protests may be expected if, say the division in New Jersey and that in Pennsylvania is mobilized and Guardsmen in New York and Ohio are not called.

The plan favored at the Pentagon, it is learned, is to call smaller units — regimental combat teams or special troops—from all over the country. But here they run into State pride. Guard leaders want to keep the divisions—with their past history as State units—intact.

Truman Held Likely To Ask More Billions

tion last night, from the Administration bill submitted to Congress yesterday to carry out the control program, and from the comments of highly placed economists in the Government, here is the picture of the proposed regulatory measures and their present applications:

Allocations and Priorities. The Administration wants the authority, on a compulsory basis, to direct scarce materials to military uses. Congressional Republicans will fight to begin it, at least, on a voluntary system handled by industry.

Steel will be the first item to be parcelled out on an allocation system. The prospects are, however, that allocations will shortly be extended to other metals such as copper, lead and zinc, to lumber and paper, and possibly rubber, some chemicals and even electric power.

Limitations. A limitation order is the obverse of an allocation. The Government will seek to limit production of those goods that use the scarce materials mentioned above.

Thus, the Government proposes cut back the production of autos, television sets, and other consumer goods that require large amounts of metal and electrical equipment.

Inventory Controls. The power is sought to set up regulations on the size of stockpiles of scarce materials and items business may have or accumulate.

Requisitioning. This is partly a device to prevent hoarding—by the threat of confiscating excess accumulations — and partly a measure to make sure that military production can get the supplies it needs, wherever they happen to be located, or whoever owns them.

Consumer Credit Controls. The aim is to cut down installment buying, which is now concentrated on autos and TV sets. The method would be a restoration of the Federal Reserve Board's power to specify the amount of the down payment (raising it from present levels) and the time in which the whole purchase would have to be paid (shortening the present usual period).

This would have the effect of reducing buying on time, although it would by no means eliminate it.

Housing Credit Controls. Besides the measures announced Tuesday, under which the Government will extend much less credit itself for housing construction and modernization, the Administration wants to cut down on non-Government financed housing, which accounts for about two thirds of the total new housing.

It proposes to do this just as it would control installment buying of autos. In other words, it will tell banks and lending companies what the minimum down payment on a house must be, and the maximum length of time the loan can run.

Since the most private financing of housing is already on a conservative basis, it is doubtful that the requested new authority will need be invoked for some time.

Loan Guarantees. A revival of the World War II "V-loans" is contemplated. The Federal Reserve System would guarantee bank loans to defense production enterprises to permit them to expand and take on big contracts.

Expansion Loans. As in World War II, the Administration wants the power and money to make direct long-term loans to industry to increase its capacity and produc-

Metals and Materals Purchases. It is proposed to put the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and subsidiary Government corporations back in the business of buying up metals and others raw materials needed for defense production.

These last measures to increase production capacity and supplies, which also include the power to make long-term contracts with producers, are considered by economists the most important part of the President's program.

They feel that in some items, no matter how much civilian consumption may be cut back, the capacity to produce is simply not enough. Thus the power and money are desired to permit the building of new production facilities. Steel expansion is generally considered the most obvious place to start. Expansion like this takes time—one of two years anyway—and the need is for a quick beginning.

Meantime, it was learned that all the remaining Government-owned, war-built synthetic rubber plants that are now on a stand-by basis will be put back into production within a few weeks or months.

Commodity Speculation. The proposal is to give the Securities and Exchange Commission authority to prescribe the margin requirements on buying and selling of commodities for future delivery. The higher the margins generally, the less the incentive and opportunity for speculation.

Administration. Besides the functions that would naturally be performed by the SEC, RFC and Federal Reserve Board, there are those of allocations and limitations which will probably be initially conducted by the Commerce Department.

But as the program grows, and it seems inevitable that it must, it is almost certain that a new agency, possibly something like the War Production Board of the last war, will have to be created to take over the job.

Taxes. The Administration's tax program has not yet been worked out, and the big question remains on what proportion of the new spending can be met by current taxation, and what by borrowing.

When the estimate for the increased outlays was still below five billion dollars, the plan was to call for equivalent amount of higher taxes. Above five billions, however, it is conceded that less than 100 percent of the money can be raised by taxation. And the higher the amount, the smaller the percent of coverage, it is assumed.

A passage in the President's message to Congress relating to the aim of eliminating profiteering was generally interpreted yesterday as a veiled reference to reimposition of excess profits taxes.

This interpretation, however, is believed to be in error; it is thought that Administration will not request this form of a tax levy.

Enemy Failed, Truman Told

lauding American holding actions, said:

"Our casualties, despite overwhelming odds, have been relatively light."

He said future developments could not be predicted and that military strategy will involve "planned withdrawals as well as local advances," but that American strength will increase and Communist strength will reduce."

The enemy "has his great chance but failed to exploit it," he said. "We are now in Korea in force, and with God's help we are there to stay until the constitutional authority of the republic is fully restored."

Lost Their Chance, He Tells Truman

Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported to President Truman yesterday that the North Koreans have had their "great chance," but have "failed to exploit it." He said that the Americans had a "secure base" in Korea, and are "there to stay" until success is achieved.

Mr. Truman read a part of MacArthur's report in a talk to the American people last night, explaining that he had heard from the Far East commander just a few hours before. This is what MacArthur said:

"It is, of course, impossible to predict with any degree of accuracy future incidents of a military campaign. Over a broad front involving continuous local struggles, there are bound to be ups and downs, losses as well as successes.

"But the issue of battle is now fully joined and will proceed along lines of action in which we will not be without choice.

"Our hold upon the southern part of Korea represents a secure base. Our casualties, despite overwhelming odds, have been relatively light. Our strength will continually increase while that of the enemy will relatively decrease. His supply line is insecure.

"He has had his great chance but failed to exploit it. We are now in Korea in force, and with God's help we are there to stay until the constitutional authority of the republic is fully restored."

Truman Denounces Hoarding

rectly for the attack on Southern Korea.

After saying that the action of the United Nations to put down lawless aggression in Korea would long stand as a landmark in history, Mr. Truman continued:

"Only a few countries have failed to indorse the efforts of the United Nations to stop the fighting in Korea. The most important of these is the Soviet Union. The Soviet Union has boycotted meetings of the United Nations Security Council, and it has refused to support the actions of the United Nations with respect to Korea.

"The United States requested the Soviet Government, two days after the fighting started, to use its influence with the North Koreans to have them withdraw. The Soviet Government refused.

"The Soviet Government has said many times that it wants peace in the world, but its attitude toward this act of aggression against the Republic of Korea is in direct contradition of its statements."

The President, looking ahead, said:

"Our military needs are large, and to meet them will require hard work and steady effort, but I know that we can produce what we need if each of us does his part—each man, each woman, each soldier, each civilian. This is a time for all of us to pitch in and work together."

Mr Truman followed the text of his speech closely with only a few minor interpolations. Occasionally he spoke with considerable emphasis, as when he said the invasion of South Korea was an act "of raw aggression."

Senate Confirms Hastie to Seat On Appeals Court

The Senate yesterday confirmed without opposition President Truman's appointment of Judge William Henry Hastie to the Third United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The circuit includes Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and the Virgin Islands.

Judge Hastie, a Negro, formerly was Governor of the Virgin Islands and a Federal District Judge. He now is serving on the Third Circuit under a recess appointment.

The Circuit Court bench is the highest judicial post to which a Negro ever has been named in this country.

Senators Hendrickson (R., N. J.), Lehman (D., Lib., N. Y.), and Myers (D., Pa.), praised Hastie's record as a judge and an administrator and urged his confirmation.

Texas Concedes Fifth Place in Census to Ohio

Columbus, Ohio, July 19 (U.P.).—Mighty Texas, where everything supposedly is bigger, bowed to Ohio today in the battle over the census.

The Dallas census office reported that Texas unofficially has 7,667,060 persons in 1950. That places the Lone Star State in sixth place among the State. Ohio is fifth with some 7,900,000.

A claim from Houston that Texas had shoved Ohio out of fifth place in population among the states brought a snort of indignation from Paul Sherlock, secretary of the Ohio Development and Publicity Commission.

"Ohio is still the fifth most populous State in the country despite the brags of Texans," he declared.

Texas, gulping its man-sized pride, admitted today that Sherlock is right.

unceilinged armed forces and defense priorities on the home front were immediately introduced in both Houses and expeditious hearings ordered.

Setting a fast timetable, Senate Administration Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) told the Senate Congress will be held in session "until every aspect" of the President's message has been considered.

"I predict," said Lucas, "that his program, in general, will receive the overwhelming approval of this Congress."

House Speaker Sam Rayburn (Texas) said the House may pass the economic control bill next week.

3-Week Limit Suggested

There was even some optimistic cloakroom talk of clearing the entire emergency program within three weeks, so Congress could take the mid-summer recess previously planned.

Hardly had the clerk finished reading the message before Senate Banking Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) and Representative Brent Spence (D., Ky.), House chairman, introduced companion bills providing the credit, allocations, and priorities controls asked.

Maybank scheduled hearings on the bill beginning Monday, with Resources Board Chairman Stuart W. Symington the first witness. Maybank said hearings would be concluded in three days and he hoped to report the bill late next week. "We've got a war to win," said the South Carolinian.

House Banking Chairman Spence said he will probably hold House hearings at the same time, so witnesses can shuttle between the same committees.

Simultaneously, Senate Armed Services Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) and Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), House chairman, introduced bills removing present manpower ceilings on the armed forces and freezing enlistments for a year.

Tydings called a committee meeting for today on both bills, and said he saw no reason to take testimony on these measures.

House Armed Services Chairman Vinson indicated his committee will meet Friday and handle the armed forces bill with dispatch.

House Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) meanwhile awaited formal Budget Bureau estimates on Mr. Truman's request for 10 billion dollars for the military. The emergency money is expected to be carried in a supplemental bill, separate from the $34,600,000,000 omnibus appropriation measure now before the Senate.

No immediate direct opposition was voiced to the 10 billion dollars for the military, but some members said they were "flabbergasted" at the amount.

Even Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.), the GOP's leading spending critic, withheld any commitment against it. He said he would support any amount he knew definitely "would help the war effort, and not retard it by wasteful spending."

Carries No Timetable

The President's request for an increase in taxes to finance heightened military costs carried no timetable. The new tax program, having as its major aim "the elimination of profiteering, will be laid before Congress" at the appropriate time, as soon as the necessary studies are completed," Mr. Truman said.

Leaders took this to mean Congress will not be asked to approve new taxes until late this year (probably after the elections) or early next. Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) said he thought the new tax bill could very well wait until then. George said he agreed with the President's thesis that new revenues should be provided to finance increased defense costs. But he opposed suggestions in other quarters that the increases be imposed on a retroactive basis.

A number of legislators, however, urged an immediate tax increase to help hold down inflation and provide needed revenue. Calling a meeting of the Joint Congressional Economic Committee for Friday morning, Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) recommended excess profits taxation "now." Warning against "temporizing" with inflation, O'Mahoney said Congress also should face up to the problem of "freezing prices."

Senator Lyndon B. Johnson (D., Texas) led off a small chorus of pleas for "full mobilization" as soon as possible.

"The President's program is an excellent blueprint for action as far as it goes," said Johnson. "Personally, I think we must go much farther, much faster."

Smathers Fears 'Regret'

Representative George A. Smathers (D., Fla.), who will move over to the Senate in January, voiced the same plea. Smathers said we may regret it if we fail to take every economic and military precaution we took early in World War II.

Ironically, Senator Arthur V. Watkins (R., Utah), one of the first to challenge the President's authority to act without Congress in Korea, also suggested the President's program doesn't go far enough.

Said Watkins: "Because of the danger that a showdown with Russia may come at any moment, I doubt that the President's program is sufficient to provide a margin of reasonable safety."

What looked like a bipartisan accord on at least the outlines of the program appeared to be shaping up before the Senate Republican Policy Committee took a look at the detailed economic control legislation.

It was after this meeting that Taft said he thought the powers asked were "too broad."

"We are anxious to give the President any power necessary to carry out his preparedness proposals," Taft told newsmen. "But a quick examination of the bill indicates that it is a good deal broader in some respects than the war powers act of the last war."

Provision Questioned

Taft particularly questioned a provision that would permit allocation of facilities as well as materials. He said that may mean that the President would have power "to step in and tell a manufacturing concern that it can't make a certain item in its plant but must make something else."

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) also said after the meeting: "I don't want to criticize the bill, but it does seem to me that Mr. Truman is asking for powers that go beyond any that a President ever requested in wartime."

Reds in India Report Shakeup in Party

Bombay, July 19 (AP).—India's Communist party today said it has staged a shakeup in which its general secretary was fired and its politburo made over.

Realigning itself to mirror the Chinese Communist Party, the Communist removed General Secretary B. T. Ranadive and replaced him with Rajeshwar Rao, who is leading a peasant insurrection in Hyderabad State, a communique said.

Britain Pleased by U. S. Assuming Burden

London, July 19 (AP).—Britain today officially applauded President Truman's call to Congress for more money and power to deal with the Korean crisis.

A Foreign Office sopkesman said this country regards it "as highly significant that the United States should take such far-reaching steps, with all the sacrifices involved, in order to fulfill its obligations to the United Nations."

Prime Minister Attlee is expected personally to pay tribute to Mr. Truman's program in the House of Commons in the next day or so.

One of Attlee's associates said the British government is not likely at this time to match the measures asked by the Truman Administration mainly because the whole machinery of British military preparedness has been virtually intact since the end of the war.

Additionally, this informant noted, Britain already is spending proportionately more on defense than the United States. Approximately one quarter of the country's annual budget of nearly nine billion dollars is devoted to defense.

Congressmen React To Truman Message

Some congressional reaction to President Truman's message follows:

Democratic Leader John W. McCormack: "In this critical situation we must give the President whatever is needed."

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.): "We are all united behind the President (as Commander-in-Chief)."

Representative Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.): Republicans will "do what is necessary to guarantee security" but will carefully scrutinize all these requests" and not grant "blank-check authority."

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.): "A good message, by a good American."

Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.): Congress will uphold the President but should examine "the soundness of his proposals."

Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.): "We must remember that the freedom and security of the entire world is at stake."

Representative Leslie Arends (Ind.), House Republican whip: "On the whole, I am pretty much in agreement with the President's program."

Senator Owen Brester (R., Me.): "My complaint is that the President didn't present the Baruch plan for industrial mobilization. After five years, haven't they got the plan ready?"

'Deplorable' Defenses Stir Debate in Britain

London, July 19 (U.P.).—A member of Parliament referred to Britain's air defenses today as "deplorable" and opposition leader Winston Churchill demanded to know to what extent Britons were "being shamefully let down."

Informed sources said a general debate on defense probably would be held Wednesday as Churchill threw his influence behind the increasing group of Britons voicing anxiety over the island's defenses if the Korean conflict explodes into a third world war.

Churchill made the demand in pressing Defense Minister Emmanuel Shinwell to agree to answer anxious questions. Shinwell today refused to answer questions on whether the army had adequate modern equipment.

After a verbal duel with Churchill over the matter, Shinwell retorted: "If there should be a debate I will do my best to satisfy the natural curiosity of the right honorable gentleman."

Churchill replied:: "It is not 'natural curiosity' to try to know to what extent one's country is being shamefully let down."

Shinwell said Churchill had no right to make such allegations before the facts had been presented to the House.

Explosion Near Office Of Chiang Kills Three

Taipei, Formosa, July 19 (AP).—An explosives-laden Nationalist army truck exploded today within 500 yards of Chiang Kai shek's downtown office. The blast killed three persons and seriously injured 12.

(This dispatch did not say whether Chiang was in his office.)

A refreshment stand was blown to bits.

have to continue "for a number of years."

This country and other members of the United Nations that have joined the effort to bring peace to Korea, Mr. Truman said, must expect "a hard and costly military operation."

He continued:

"We must also prepare ourselves better to fulfill our responsibilities toward the preservation of international peace and security against possible further aggression. In this effort, we will not flinch in the face of danger or difficulty.

"The free world has made it clear, through the United Nations, that lawless aggression will be met with force. This is the significance of Korea—and it is a significance whose importance cannot be overestimated.

"I shall not attempt to predict the course of events. But I am sure that those who have it in their power to unleash or withold acts of aggression must realize that new recourse to aggression in the world today might well strain to the breaking point the fabric of world peace."

Mr. Truman said the attack upon Korea made it plain beyond all doubt that "the international Communist movement is prepared to use armed invasion to conquer independent nations." However, as was expected, he stopped short of saying that the Soviet Union ordered the attack in Korea.

President Truman decided to have his message to Congress read by clerks, feeling, it was said, that appearance on Capitol Hill might tend to overdramatize the situation.

These were the highlights of his message:

He told Congress he would soon ask for appropriations for the armed forces totaling 10 billion dollars, and he served notice that he would ask for additional funds to step up the arming of our Atlantic Pact allies and certain other free nations (presumably countries like Iran that are threatened by Soviet aggression).

He asked Congress to remove the statutory ceiling on the number of men and women the Army, Navy and Air Force may enroll, and thus make possible an unlimited expansion.

He announced that he had authorized Secretary of Defense Johnson to call up as many National Guard units and Reserve units and individuals as may be needed, and also to use the Selective Service system to such extent as may be required.

He asked Congress to enact legislation authorizing the Government to establish priorities and allocate materials for the armed forces, to limit the use of materials for nonessential purposes, to prevent inventory hoarding, and to requisition supplies needed for national defence.

He said that the Government would modify its programs wherever possible, and so lessen the demand upon materials and manpower.

He told the lawmakers that, as soon as necessary studies are completed, he will submit a program for heavier taxes. This, he said, would help finance the new military program and offset inflationary pressures. He promised that it would be a balanced tax program, fair to all, and one that should eliminate profiteering.

He asked Congress to help him combat inflation by authorizing the control of consumer credit used for commodity speculation. He also asked that further controls be authorized to restrain expansion of privately-financed real.

He expressed confidence that businessmen, labor, farmers and consumers will use restraint and try to avoid inflation. However, he added, "if a sharp rise in prices should make it necessary, I shall not hesitate to recommend the more drastic measures of price control and rationing."

President Sees 'No Easy Solution in Korea'; Asks Relentless Determination—

Following is the text of the message which President Truman sent to Congress yesterday.

To the Congress of the United States:

I AM reporting to the Congress on the situation which has been created in Korea, and on the actions which this Nation has taken, as a member of the United Nations, to meet this situation. I am also laying before the Congress my views concerning the significance of these events for this Nation and the world, and certain recommendations for legislative action which I believe should be taken at this time.

At 4 o'clock in the morning, Sunday, June 25, Korean time, armed forces from north of the thirty-eighth parallel invaded the Republic of Korea.

The Republic of Korea was established as an independent nation in August, 1948, after a free election held under the auspices of the United Nations. This election, which was originally intended to cover all of Korea, was held only in the part of the Korean peninsula south of the thirty-eighth parallel, because the Soviet government, which occupied the peninsula north of that parallel, refused to allow the election to be held in the area under its control.

The United States, and a majority of the other members of the United Nations, have recognized the Republic in Korea. The admission of Korea to the United Nations has been blocked by the Soviet veto.

In December, 1948, the Soviet government stated that it had withdrawn its occupation troops from northern Korea, and that a local regime had been established. The authorities in northern Korea continued to refuse to permit United Nations observers to pass the thirty-eighth parallel to supervise or observe a free election, or to verify the withdrawal of Soviet troops.

U. N. Mission on Scene When Attack Began

Nevertheless, the United Nations continued its efforts to obtain a freely-elected government for all of Korea, and at the time of the attack, a United Nations commission, made up of representatives of seven nations—Australia, China, El Salvador, France, India, the Philippines and Turkey—was in the Republic of Korea.

Just one day before the attack of June 25, field observers attached to the United Nations Commission on Korea had completed a routine tour, lasting two weeks, of the military positions of the Republic of Korea south of the thirty-eighth parallel. The report of these international observers stated that the army of the Republic of Korea was organized entirely for defense. The observers found the parallel guarded on the south side by small bodies of troops in scattered outposts, with roving patrols. They found no concentration of troops and no preparation to attack. The observers concluded that the absence of armor, air support, heavy artillery, and military supplies precluded any offensive actions by the forces of the Republic of Korea.

On June 25, within a few hours after the invasion was launched from the north, the Commission reported to the United Nations that the attack had come without warning and without provocation.

The reports from the Commission make it unmistakably clear that the attack was naked, deliberate, unprovoked aggression, without a shadow of justification.

Security of All Nations Threatened by Attack

This outright breach of the peace, in violation of the United Nations Charter, created a real and present danger to the security of every nation. This attack was, in addition, a demonstration of contempt for the United Nations, since it was an attempt to settle, by military aggression, a question which the United Nations had been working to settle by peaceful means.

The attack on the Republic of Korea, therefore, was a clear challenge to the basic principles of the United Nations Charter and to the specific actions taken by the United Nations in Korea. If this challenge had not been met squarely, the effectiveness of the United Nations would have been all but ended, and the hope of mankind that the United Nations would develop into an institution of world order would have been shattered

Prompt action was imperative. The Security Council of the United Nations met, at the request of the United States, in New York at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, Sunday, June 25, Eastern daylight time. Since there is a 14-hour difference in time between Korea and New York, this meant that the Council convened just 24 hours after the attack began.

At this meeting, the Security Council passed a resolution which called for the immediate cessation of hostilities and for the withdrawal of the invading troops to the thirty-eighth parallel, and which requested the members of the United Nations to refrain from giving aid to the northern aggressors and to assist in the execution of this resolution. The representative of the Soviet Union to the Security Council stayed away from the meeting, and the Soviet government has refused to support the Council's resolution.

The attack launched on June 25 moved ahead rapidly. The tactical surprise gained by the aggressors, and their superiority in planes, tanks and artillery, forced the lightly armed defenders to retreat. The speed, the scale, and the coordination of the attack left no doubt that it had been plotted long in advance.

Pacific Forces Provide Air and Sea Support

When the attack came, our Ambassador to Korea, John J. Muccio, began the immediate evacuation of American women and children from the danger zone. To protect this evacuation, air cover and sea cover were provided by the Commander in Chief of United States Forces in the Far East, General of the Army Douglas MacArthur. In response to urgent appeals from the government of Korea, General MacArthur was immediately authorized to send supplies of ammunition to the Korean defenders. These supplies were sent by air transport, with fighter protection. The United States Seventh Fleet was ordered north from the Philippines, so that it might be available in the area in case of need.

AT THE MIKE—President Truman is shown at the microphone in the White House last night. He raised his hand to still applause when he approached the mike to deliver his talk to the American people Throughout Monday, June 26, the invaders continued their attack with no heed to the resolution of the Security Council of the United Nations. Accordingly, in order to support the resolution, and on the unanimous advice of our civil and military authorities, I ordered United States air and sea forces to give the Korean government troops cover and support.

On Tuesday, June 27, when the United Nations Commission in Korea had reported that the northern troops had neither ceased hostilities nor withdrawn to the thirty-eighth parallel, the United Nations Security Council met again and passed a second resolution recommending that members of the United Nations furnish to the Republic of Korea such aid as might be necessary to repel the attack and to restore international peace and security in the area. The representative of the Soviet Union to the Security Council stayed away from this meeting also, and the Soviet government has refused to support the Council's resolution.

The vigorous and unhesitating actions of the United Nations and the United States in the face of this aggression met with an immediate and overwhelming response throughout the free world. The first blow of aggression had brought dismay and anxiety to the hearts of men the world over. The fateful events of the 1930's, when aggression unopposed bred more aggression and eventually war, were fresh in our memory.

Free Nations of World Learned Their Lesson

But the free nations had learned the lesson of history. Their determined and united actions uplifted the spirit of free men everywhere. As a result, where there had been dismay there is hope; where there had been anxiety there is firm determination.

Fifty-two of the 59 member nations have supported the United Nations action to restore peace in Korea.

A number of member nations have offered military support or other types of assistance for the United Nations action to repel the aggressors in Korea. In a third resolution, passed on July 7, the Security Council requested the United States to designate a commander for all the forces of the members of the United Nations in the Korean operation, and authorized these forces to fly the United Nations flag. In response to this resolution, General MacArthur has been designated as commander of these forces. These are important steps forward in the development of a United Nations system of collective security. Already, aircraft of two nations—Australia and Great Britain—and naval vessels of five nations—Australia, Canada, Great Britain, the Netherlands and New Zealand—have been made available for operations in the Korean area, along with forces of Korea and the United States, under General MacArthur's command. The other offers of assistance that have been and will continue to be made will be coordinated by the United Nations and by the unified command, in order to support the effort in Korea to maximum advantage.

All the members of the United Nations who have indorsed the action of the Security Council realize the significance of the step that has been taken. This united and resolute action to put down lawless aggression is a milestone toward establishment of a rule of law among nations.

Only a few countries have failed to support the common action to restore the peace. The most important of these is the Soviet Union.

Since the Soviet representative had refused to participate in the meetings of the Security Council which took action regarding Korea, the United States brought the matter directly to the attention of the Soviet government in Moscow. On June 27, we requested the Soviet government, in view of its known close relations with the North Korean regime, to use its influence to have the invaders withdraw at once.

Soviet Tries to Distort Facts on Aggression

The Soviet government, in its reply on June 29 and in subseqeunt statements, has taken the position that the attack launched by the North Korean forces was provoked by the Republic of Korea, and that the actions of the United Nations Security Council were illegal.

These Soviet claims are flatly disproved by the facts.

The attitude of the Soviet government toward the aggression against the Republic of Korea, is in direct contradiction to its often expressed intention to work with other nations to achieve peace in the world.

For our part, we shall continue to support the United Nations action to restore peace in the Korean area.

As the situation has developed, I have authorized a number of measures to be taken. Within the first week of the fighting, General MacArthur reported, after a visit to the front, that the forces from North Korea were continuing to drive south, and further support to the Republic of Korea was needed. Accordingly, General MacArthur was authorized to use United States Army troops in Korea, and to use United States aircraft of the Air Force and the Navy to conduct missions against specific military targets in Korea north of the thirty-eighth parallel, where necessary to carry out the United Nations resolution. General MacArthur was also directed to blockade the Korean coast.

The attacking forces from the north have continued to move forward, although their advance has been slowed down. The troops of the Republic of Korea, though initially overwhelmed by the tanks and artillery of the surprise attack by the invaders, have been reorganized and are fighting bravely.

U. S. Forces Fighting a Skillful Delaying Action

United States forces, as they have arrived in the area, have fought with great valor. The Army troops have been conducting a very difficult delaying operation with skill and determination, outnumbered many times over by attacking troops, spearheaded by tanks. Despite the bad weather of the rainy season, our troops have been valiantly supported by the air and naval forces of both the United States and other members of the United Nations.

In this connection, I think it is important that the nature of our military action in Korea be understood. It should be made perfectly clear that the action was undertaken as a matter of basic moral principle. The United States was going to the aid of a nation established and supported by the United Nations and unjustifiably attacked by an aggressor force. Consequently, we were not deterred by the relative immediate superiority of the attacking forces, by the fact that our base of supplies was 5000 miles away, or by the further fact that we would have to supply our forces through port facilities that are far from satisfactory.

We are moving as rapidly as possible to bring to bear on the fighting front larger forces and heavier equipment, and to increase our naval and air superiority. But it will take time, men, and material to slow down the forces of aggression, bring those forces to a halt, and throw them back.

Nevertheless, our assistance to the Republic of Korea has prevented the invaders from crushing that nation in a few days—as they evidently expected to do. We are determined to support the United Nations in its effort to restore peace and security to Korea, and its effort to assure the people of Korea an opportunity to choose their own form of government free from coercion, as expressed in the General Assembly resolutions of November 14, 1947, and December 12, 1948.

Must Recognize Danger Of Attack in Other Areas

In addition to the direct military effort we and other members of the United Nations are making in Korea, the outbreak of aggression there requires us to consider its implications for peace throughout the world. The attack upon the Republic of Korea makes it plain beyond all doubt that the international Communist movement is prepared to use armed invasion to conquer independent nations. We must therefore recognize the possibility that armed aggression may take place in other areas.

In view of this, I have already directed that United States forces in support of the Philippines be strengthened, and that military assistance be speeded up to the Philippine government and to the associated states of Indo-China and to the forces of France in Indo-China. I have also ordered the United States Seventh Fleet to prevent any attack upon Formosa, and I have requested the Chinese government on Formosa to cease all air and sea operations agains the mainland. These steps were at once reported to the United Nations Security Council.

Our action in regard to Formosa was a matter of elementary security. The peace and stability of the Pacific area had been violently disturbed by the attack on Korea. Attacks elsewhere in the Pacific area would have enlarged the Korean crisis, thereby rendering much more difficult the carrying out of our obligations to the United Nations in Korea.

In order that there may be no doubt in any quarter about our intentions regarding Formosa, I wish to state that the United States has no territorial ambitions whatever concerning that island, nor do we seek for ourselves any special position or privilege on Formosa. The present military neutralization of Formosa is without prejudice to political questions affecting that island. Our desire is that Formosa not become embroiled in hostilities disturbing to the peace of the Pacific and that all questions affecting Formosa be settled by peaceful means as envisaged in the Charter of the United Nations. With peace reestablished, even the most complex political questions are susceptible of solution. In the presence of brutal and unprovoked aggression, however, some of these questions may have to be held in abeyance in the interest of the essential security of all.

Underscores Need for Defense of Free Nations

The outbreak of aggression in the Far East does not, of course, lessen, but instead increases, the importance of the common strength of the free nations in other parts of the world. The attack on the Republic of Korea gives added urgency to the efforts of the free nations to increase and to unify their common strength, in order to deter a potential aggressor.

To be able to accomplish this objective, the free nations must maintain a sufficient defensive military strength in being, and, even more important, a solid basis of economic strength, capable of rapid mobilization in the event of emergency.

Pentagon Warns Of Loose War Talk

The Peentagon was placarded yesterday with red-and-black lettered warnings against talking about war secrets where you shouldn't.

They said:
"Discussion of classified material in reception rooms and public places is dangerous."

The strong cooperative efforts that have been made by the United States and other free nations, since the end of World War II, to restore economic vitality to Europe and other parts of the world, and the cooperative efforts we have begun in order to increase the productive capacity of underdeveloped areas, are extremely important contributions to the growing economic strength of all the free nations, and will be of even greater importance in the future.

We have been increasing our common defensive strength under the treaty of Rio de Janeiro and the North Atlantic Treaty, which are collective security arrangements within the framework of the United Nations Charter. We have also taken action to bolster the military defenses of individual free nations, such as Greece, Turkey, and Iran.

The defenses of the North Atlantic Treaty area were considered a matter of great urgency by the North Atlantic Council in London this spring. Recent events make it even more urgent than it was at that time to build and maintain these defenses.

Under all the circumstances, it is apparent that the United States is required to increase its military strength and preparedness not only to deal with the aggression in Korea but also to increase our common defense, with other free nations, against further aggression.

The increased strength which is needed falls into three categories:

Three Classes of Aid For Present And Future

In the first place, to meet the situation in Korea, we shall need to send additional men, equipment and supplies to General MacArthur's command as rapidly as possible.

In the second place, the world situation requires that we increase substantially the size and material support of our armed forces, over and above the increases which are needed in Korea.

In the third place, we must assist the free nations associated with us in common defense to augment their military strength.

Of the three categories I have just enumerated, the first two involve increases in our military manpower, and in the material support that our men must have.

To meet the increased requirements for military manpower, I have authorized the Secretary of Defense to exceed the budgeted strength of military personnel for the Army, Navy, and Air Force, and to use the Selective Service system to such extent as may be required in order to obtain the increased strength which we must have. I have also authorized the Secretary of Defense to meet the need for military manpower by calling into active Federal service as many National Guard units and as many units and individuals of the reserve forces of the Army, Navy, and Air Forces as may be required.

I have directed the Secretary of Defense and the Joint Chiefs of Staff to keep our military manpower needs under constant study, in order that further increases may be made as required. There are now statutory limits on the sizes of the armed forces, and since we may need to exceed these limits, I recommend that they be removed.

To increase the level of our military strength will also require additional supplies and equipment. Procurement of many items has already been accelerated, in some cases for use in Korea, in others to replace reserve stocks which are now being sent to Korea, and in still others to add to our general level of preparedness. Further increases in procurement, resulting in a higher rate of production of military equipment and supplies, will be necessary.

Ten Billion Dollars Required for Military

The increases in the size of the armed forces, and the additional supplies and equipment which will be needed, will require additional appropriations. Within the next few days, I will transmit to the Congress specific requests for appropriations in the amount of approximately 10 billion dollars.

These requests for appropriations will be addressed to the needs of our own military forces. Earlier, I referred to the fact that we must also assist other free nations in the strengthening of our common defenses. The action we must take to accomplish this is just as important as the measures required to strengthen our own forces.

The authorization bill for the Mutual Defense Assistance Program for 1951, now before the House of Representatives, is an important immediate step toward the strengthening of our collective security. It should be enacted without delay.

But it is now clear that the free nations of the world must step up their common security program. The other nations associated with us in the Mutual Defense Assistance Program, like ourselves, will need to divert additional economic resources to defense purposes. In order to enable the nations associated with us to make their maximum contributions to our common defense, further assistance on our part will be required. Additional assistance may also be needed to increase the strength of certain other free nations whose security is vital to our own.

In the case of the North Atlantic area these requirements will reflect the consultations now going on with the other nations associated with us in the North Atlantic Treaty. As soon as it is possible to determine what each nation will need to do, I shall lay before the Congress a request for such funds as are shown to be necessary to the attainment and maintenance of our own strength at an adequate level.

The steps which we must take to support the United Nations action in Korea, and to increase our own strength and the common defense of the free world, will necessarily have repercussions upon our domestic economy.

Many of our young men are in battle now, or soon will be. Others must be trained. The equipment and supplies they need, and those required for adequate emergency reserves, must be produced. They must be made available promptly, at reasonable cost, and without disrupting the efficient functioning of the economy.

Supplies Sought Without Endangering Economy

We must continue to recognize that our strength is not to be measured in military terms alone. Our power to join in a common defense of peace rests fundamentally on the productive capacity and energies of our people. In all that we do, therefore, we must make sure that the economic strength which is at the base of our security is not impaired, but continues to grow.

Our economy has tremendous productive power. Our total output of goods and services is now running at an annual rate of nearly 270 billion dollars—over 100 billion dollars higher than in 1939. The rate is now about 13 billion dollars higher than a year ago, and about eight billion dollars higher than the previous record rate reached in 1948. All the foregoing figures have been adjusted for price changes, and are therefore a measure of actual output. The index of industrial production, now at 197, is 12 percent higher than the average for last year, and 81 percent higher than in 1939.

We now have 61½ million people in civilian employment. There are 16 million more people in productive jobs than there were in 1939. We are now producing 11 million more tons of steel a year than in the peak war year 1944. Electric power output has risen from 128 billion kilowatt hours in 1939, to 228 billion hours in 1944, to 317 billion hours now. Food production is about a third higher than it ever was before the war, and is practically as high as it was during the war years, when we were sending far more food abroad than we are now.

The potential productive power of our economy is even greater. We can achieve some immediate increase in production by employing men and facilities not now fully utilized. And we can continue to increase our total annual output each year, by putting to use the increasing skills of our growing population and the higher productive capacity which results from plant expansion, new inventions and more efficient methods of production.

With this enormous economic strength, the new and necessary programs I am now recommending can be undertaken with confidence in the ability of our economy to bear the strains involved. Nevertheless, the magnitude of the demands for military purposes that are now foreseeable, in an economy which is already operating at a very high level, will require substantial redirection of economic resources.

Some Check on Normal Production Is Ahead

Under the program for increasing military strength which I have outlined above, military and related procurement will need to be expanded at a more rapid rate than total production can be expanded. Some materials were in short supply even before the Korean situation developed. The steel industry, for example, was operating at capacity levels, and even so was not able to satisfy all market demands. Some other construction materials, and certain other products, were also under pressure and their prices were rising—even before the outbreak in Korea.

The substantial speed-up of military procurement will intensify these shortages. Action must be taken to insure that these shortages do not interfere with or delay the materials and the supplies needed for the national defense.

Further, the dollars spent now for military purposes will have a magnified effect upon the economy as a whole, since they will be added to the high level of current civilian demand. These increased pressures, if neglected, could drive us into a general inflationary situation. The best evidence of this is the recent price advances in many raw materials and in the cost of living, even upon the mere expectancy of increased military outlays.

In these circumstances, we must take action to insure that the increased national defense needs will be met, and that in the process we do not bring on an inflation, with its resulting hardship for every family.

At the same time, we must recognize that it will be necessary for a number of years to support continuing defense expenditures, including assistance to other nations, at a higher level than we had previously planned. Therefore, the economic measures we take now must be planned and used in such a manner as to develop and maintain our economic strength for the long run as well as the short run.

I am recommending certain legislative measures to help achieve these objectives. I believe that each of them should be promptly enacted. We must be sure to take the steps that are necessary now, or we shall surely be required to take much more drastic steps later on.

Controls to Be Sought Allocating Materials

First, we should adopt such direct measures as are now necessary to assure prompt and adequate supplies of goods for military and essential civilian use. I therefore recommend that the Congress now enact legislation authorizing the Government to establish priorities and allocate materials as necessary to promote the national security; to limit the use of materials for nonessential purposes; to prevent inventory hoarding; and to requisition supplies and materials needed for the national defense, particularly excessive and unnecessary inventories.

Second, we must promptly adopt some general measures to compensate for the growth of demand caused by the expansion of military programs in a period of high civilian incomes. I am directing all executive agencies to conduct a detailed review of Government programs, for the purpose of modifying them wherever practicable to lessen the demand upon services, commodities, raw materials, manpower, and facilities which are in competition with those needed for national defense. The Government, as well as the public, must exercise great restraint in the use of those goods and services which are needed for our increased defense efforts.

Nevertheless, the increased appropriations for the Department of Defense, plus the defense-related appropriations which I have recently submitted for power development and atomic energy, and others which will be necessary for such purposes as stockpiling, will mean sharply increased Federal expenditures. For this reason, we should increase Federal revenues more sharply than I have previously recommended, in order to reduce the inflationary effect of the Government deficit.

Fair Tax Increases Will Be Required

There are two fundamental principles which must guide us in framing measures to obtain these additional revenues:

(a) We must make every effort to finance the greatest possible amount of needed expenditures by taxation. The increase of taxes is our basic weapon in offsetting the inflationary pressures exerted by enlarged Government expenditures. Heavier taxes will make general controls less necessary.

(b) We must provide for a balanced system of taxation which makes a fair distribution of the tax burden among the different groups of individuals and business concerns in the Nation. A balanced tax program should also have as a major aim the elimination of profiteering.

At an appropriate time, as soon as the necessary studies are completed, I shall present to the Congress a program based on these principles to assure the financing of our needs in a manner which will be fair to all our citizens, which will help prevent inflation, and which will maintain the fiscal position of the Nation in the soundest possible condition.

As a further important safeguard against inflation, we shall need to restrain credit expansion. I recommend that the Congress now authorize the control of consumer credit and credit used for commodity speculation. In the housing field, where Government credit is an important factor, I have directed that certain available credit restraints be applied, and I recommend that further controls be authorized, particularly to restrain expansion of privately-financed real estate credit. These actions will not only reduce the upward pressure on prices, but will also reduce the demand for certain critical materials which are required for he production of military equipment.

Congress to Be Asked For Production Loans

Third, we must take steps to accelerate and increase the production of essential materials, products, and services. I recommend, therefore, that the Congress authorize, for national defense purposes, production loan guarantees and loans to increase production. I also recommend that the Congress authorize the making of long-term contracts and other means to encourage the production of certain materials in short supply.

In the forthcoming midyear economic report, I shall discuss in greater detail the current economic situation, and the economic measures which I have recommended. If these measures are made available promptly, and firmly administered, I believe we will be able to meet military needs without serious disruption of the economy.

If we are to be successful, there must be sensible and restrained action by businessmen, labor, farmers and consumers. The people of this country know the seriousness of inflation, and will, I am sure, do everything they can to see that it does not come upon us. However, if a sharp rise in prices should make it necessary, I shall not hesitate to recommend the more drastic measures of price control and rationing.

The hard facts of the present situation require relentless determination and firm action. The course of the fighting thus far in Korea shows that we can expect no easy solution to the conflict there. We are confronted in Korea with well-supplied, well-led forces which have been long trained for aggressive action. We and the other members of the United Nations who have joined in the effort to restore peace in Korea must expect a hard and costly military operation.

We must also prepare ourselves better to fulfill our responsibilities toward the preservation of international peace and security against possible further aggression. In this effort, we will not flinch in the face of danger or difficulty.

The free world has made it clear, through the United Nations, that lawless aggression will be met with force. This is the significance of Korea—and it is a significance whose importance cannot be over-estimated.

I shall not attempt to predict the course of events. But I am sure that those who have it in their power to unleash or withhold acts of armed aggression must realize that new recourse to aggression in the world today might well strain to the breaking point the fabric of world peace.

U. S. Can Be Proud Of Its Present Role

The United States can be proud of the part it has played in the United Nations action in this crisis. We can be proud of the unhesitating support of the American people for the resolute actions taken to halt the aggression in Korea and to support the cause of world peace.

The Congress of the United States, by its strong, bipartisan support of the steps we are taking and by repeated actions in support of international cooperation, has contributed most vitally to the cause of peace. The expressions of support which have been forthcoming from the leaders of both political parties for the actions of our Government and of the United Nations in dealing with the present crisis, have buttressed the firm morale of the entire free world in the face of this challenge.

The American people, together with other free peoples, seek a new era in world affairs. We seek a world where all men may live in peace and freedom, with steadily improving living conditions, under governments of their own free choice.

For ourselves, we seek no territory or domination over others. We are determined to maintain our democratic institutions so that Amerians now and in the future can enjoy personal liberty, economic opportunity, and political equality. We are concerned with advancing our prosperity and our well-being as a Nation, but we know that our future is inseparably joined with the future of other free peoples.

We will follow the course we have chosen with courage and with faith, because we carry in our hearts the flame of freedom. We are fighting for liberty and for peace—and with God's blessing we shall succeed.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
July 19, 1950.

Dewey Says Program Is 'In Right Direction'

Albany, N.Y., July 19 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey said today that President Truman's proposals to cope with the international problem would not "wholly meet the Communist world-wide threat" but were a "strong step in the right direction."

"I wholeheartedly support the program," the twice-defeated Republican presidential nominee said in a brief statement. "I hope all Americans will vigorously support the objectives of the program."

What Mobilization Means

President Truman's call upon Congress for expanded military and partial civilian mobilization means, if Congress approves in full:

For families—

Tightened installment credit, higher down payments and less time to pay.

Much higher taxes.

No price, wage or ration controls now, but later if prices soar.

Fewer things to buy, such as autos, and television sets, and other heavy household goods.

For men of military age—

A draft summons—for those over 19 and under 26 as needed.

A mandatory call to active service for National Guardsmen and reservists if their units or individual assignments are wanted by the military.

For business—

Controls over materials, including Government authority to ration supplies and set up priorities to say who should get them.

Limited output of civilian goods which take big quantities of steel and other scarce materials.

Curbs on inventory hoarding.

The possibility that needed materials will be requisitioned.

Higher down payment margins in commodity trading.

Higher taxes to produce revenues and curb profiteering.

Holding The Line

Although it is too early to be optimistic about Korea, the stabilizing actions being fought by American and South Korean forces are encouraging. It is particularly good news to have the First Cavalry (infantry) and Twenty-fifth Divisions now on the scene to supplement the Twenty-fourth, the First having made an unopposed amphibious landing and the Twenty-fifth being supposedly already in action. The stiffening among the South Korean forces along the east coast also is significant, and indicates that, properly seasoned and armed, they make good soldiers.

It is a mistake to regard what has happened in Korea solely in terms of a retreat. No one could have expected small American forces entering the area initially to stabilize the front at once. It was necessary to establish and protect supply lines, and few troops actually saw combat at first. What has taken place is a series of delaying actions—buying time with space and blood—until greater American power could be brought to bear. That power is steadily increasing, though at this moment it still may not be equal to the enemy's. The appointment of Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, an officer of Army command rank to direct the fighting, suggests that at least a full American corps, and probably more, is contemplated.

There now is good reason to hope that American forces may be able to hold, if not around Taejon, at least well north of the supply port of Pusan. Air raids have begun to tell on Communist tank positions and fuel supplies, air superiority is being established and the Kum River has proved a formidable tank obstacle. It may, of course, be breached, but the Communist forces have shown no great inclination to push on without their tanks. The great American need probably is still effective antitank weapons.

All in all, considering the difficulties and distances involved, American forces have moved into action in substantial numbers quickly. This is a tribute to the essential role being played by the Navy. It would be unrealistic to suppose that the vast new expenditures called for by President Truman will make much difference in the Korean fighting itself unless it should bog down in a stalemate. But assuredly those expenditures should encompass the lessons the Korean experience points up—the importance of trained ground troops with modern weapons, improved tanks (which have been neglected for want of funds), tactical aviation and particularly air transport for airborne troops.

Identifying Subsidies

For 17 months the obviously sensible recommendation of the Hoover Commission that airmail pay be separated from subsidies to airlines has been languishing in Congress. Now the House Interstate Commerce Committee is reported to be ready to act on the Kennedy bill, which encompasses the Hoover recommendation. Yet there is disturbing indication that, despite the preponderance of evidence in favor of the bill, a small group of determined opponents have made considerable headway and may be in a position to block it.

It would be a dodge to put off positive action pending "more study." The Kennedy bill has been amended to take account of most of the points raised by the Civil Aeronautics Board. It would direct the CAB to fix fair rates for carrying the mail and to prescribe methods for compensation, the rates to be determined on the basis of the cost of services actually rendered plus a reasonable return. The board would then determine what airline subsidies as such were warranted from the standpoint of defense and essential commerce, with the burden of proof on the carriers themselves. In order to provide standards of administration, the CAB would be called upon to conduct a comprehensive study and report to Congress by April 1, 1951, as to the probable cost for the next five years. A sum of $300,000 would be authorized for this study—an essential provision in light of the CAB's present load.

The difference between this kind of study and that asked by opponents of the Kennedy bill is that the former would be a sequel to a definite declaration of policy by Congress and the latter would be mere obfuscation. Certainly the separation cannot be made effective at once, but if the opponents were to have their say the decision would drag on indefinitely. There is no implication in the separation that the airlines would receive less subsidy. What is important, however, is to take the burden of subsidies off the back of the Postoffice. As it it is now, no one knows how much of the 125 million dollars a year paid to the airlines by the Government is for carrying the mail and how much is subsidy. Such subsidies need to be out in the open. If the airlines can continue to justify support, as we have no doubt they can in most instances, well and good. But the public has a right, without further delay, to know where its money goes.

Reply To Aggression

President Truman has put aggressive communism on notice that it must reckon with American might no less than American principle. The policy that he outlined to Congress yesterday noon and to the people last night was implicit, to be sure, in the prompt dispatch of troops to Korea on June 27. But now the President has spelled it out. He has left no doubt as to how the United States will react to aggressive totalitarian assaults. And he has called upon Congress to provide the sinews that will be needed to make this bold antiaggression policy effective.

The new course on which the Administration has embarked was dictated by events in Korea, and its first objective is to provide the increased strength needed to subdue the aggressors in that unhappy land. But mere equipment of additional forces for Korea and replacement of casualties would not necesssitate the appropriation of the 10 billion dollars or the legislation of the economic controls requested by the President. Mr. Truman frankly recognizes the fact that the outbreak of aggression in Korea raises the specter of armed invasion by Communist forces in other parts of the world. It is that peril against which the United States has to prepare. If the Korean Reds should abandon their insane venture tomorrow, this country would still have to expand its armed forces to minimize the danger from other possible outbreaks of aggression.

For this reason the President emphasizes the necessity of building up and maintaining the strength of the North Atlantic Treaty powers. The Communist challenge is not alone to the United States but to the free world. European factories as well as our own ought to begin turning out more weapons to offset the might that the Soviet Union has amassed in its own territory as well as in the satellite countries and is now developing in eastern Germany. Defense of the North Atlantic area is now a cooperative venture in which each nation must do its part in accord with its capacity and resources. The passage of the MAP bill through the House yesterday by a vote of 361 to 1, with Congressman Marcantonio casting the only negative vote, is convincing evidence that the United States is prepared to do its part. But it is the joint program that needs to be accelerated.

The economic controls recommended by the President appear to go no further than is necessary to conserve our national stability while we mobilize the additional strength that the world situation demands. They will impose some hardships. Heavy spending and new taxes will require us to forgo some luxuries and pleasures, although it is well to remember that the initial investment in an expanded military force will be greater than the cost of its subjequent maintenance. There is no question as to the ability of the American people to shoulder the additional burden. Indeed, if we read public sentiment aright, they are ahead of the Government in demanding that effective steps be taken to insure the free world against these insidious assaults. There can be no question that the Congress will vote whatever funds and controls are essential for this purpose. Some members of Congress yesterday expressed the belief that, bold though the President's message was, it should have been even stronger.

What this means is that the United States will no longer temporize with aggressive communism. There is neither belligerence nor imperialism in that attitude. The President made a special point of reassuring the peoples of Asia that this country has no territorial ambitions whatever in Formosa. That island has been neutralized to prevent further complication of the "brutal and unprovoked aggression" in Korea, and its future status remains to be determined when peace and security have been restored. But while the United States wants no additional territory, it will not stand by and see one free country after another overrun by puppets of the Kremlin.

The American people long ago decided that if a choice had to be made freedom is worth more than peace. They are now saying that when international communism disrupts the peace to destroy freedom, it will be met by the kind of force that it employs. And we shall not wait until the menace reaches our own shores. Through the United Nations and through aid to and cooperation with other free peoples we shall meet the challenge to freedom wherever it takes the form of military aggression. While the cost of this policy will be enormous, it has been weighed in the balance and found preferable to either a third world war or totalitarian slavery.

Wallace's Reconversion

There is a small but nevertheless appreciable number of Americans who, like Henry Wallace, were jolted out of a more or less neurotic somnambulism by the Korean war. Blinded by their own day-dreams and gulled by Communist protestations of concern for peace and the underprivileged, they denounced every effort on the part of the United States to check aggression as flagrant imperialism; but the Soviet Union, it seemed, could do no wrong. Then, suddenly, Korea created the condition they had never dared to face—and actual conflict in which American soldiers were spending their lives to stop aggression nakedly fomented by Russia. "When my country is at war, and the United Nations sanctions that war," said Mr. Wallace, "I am on the side of my country and the United Nations." No doubt many less conspicuous fellow-travelers reacted in much the same way; by now, the ranks of the followers, said by J. Edgar Hoover to number half a million, are probably very much thinner. Love of country often exerts a far stronger pull than ideology, however doctrinaire.

In Mr. Wallace's case, the dream and the awakening were complicated by his illusion that he was a great popular leader marching at the head of Gideon's army. It could not have been easy for him to relinquish that particular glory. It involved a recognition, or acknowledgment, that the army was commanded, in fact, by the propagandists who created it. "Henry Wallace," says the Daily Worker, "has left Gideon's army." Well, that is what happens once a leader gets out of step in such an army. In Communist eyes Mr. Wallace is now "supporting Wall Street's intervention in Korea" and accepting "the imperialist propaganda concerning Soviet 'responsibility' for the Korean war." The disillusioned 1948 presidential candidate of the Progressive Party has now retired to pick strawberries on his Connecticut farm. We imagine he feels freer and more at home than he has felt in a long, long time.

Control Program

In his message to Congress President Truman pointed out that industrial production is 81 percent higher than in 1939 and food production is a third higher than at any time before the war and practically as high as it was during the war years when we were sending far more food abroad than we are now. Furthermore, there is still some leeway for increasing the national output. Under these conditions the country can unquestionably support a substantial increase in military expenditures without serious strain. However, it will be necessary to restrict civilian consumption of steel, construction materials, and various other products already in short supply in order to provide additional supplies of such materials for the armed forces.

If businessmen, labor, farmers, and consumers show good sense and exercise restraint in buying, the control program recommended by the President will, we believe, enable the Government to meet its military needs without an inflationary rise in living costs necessitating resort to price controls and rationing. This is a very big "if," and there is no certainty that the warning that drastic controls will be recommended if prices continue to rise will put an end to profiteering and hoarding. But the President has wisely decided to test the efficacy of a system of limited and indirect controls before turning to methods that are difficult to enforce, costly to administer and deeply resented by the public. He has asked Congress for authority to establish priorities and allocate materials needed by the military. Otherwise he is relying on credit controls and increases in taxation to check consumer buying of goods in scarce supply and to curb inflation. The mere authority to requisition supplies needed for national defense would check excessive inventory accumulation. And if industrial managements succeed in working out voluntary plans for insuring prompt and adequate supplies of goods for military use, it may not be necessary for the Government to issue allocation orders.

The proposal to reestablish controls over consumer credit would also make it possible to reduce the buying of automobiles and other durable goods on the installment plan, thereby releasing steel and various scarce materials for military use. His orders for a cutback in public housing construction and tighter restrictions on Government-insured home mortgages will slow the pace of a building boom fostered by extremely liberal housing credits that has boosted the cost of building and intensified scarcities of materials needed for military use. The President further recommends application of controls to prevent an expansion of privately financed real estate credit, but does not indicate the type of legislation required to effect it. In this case, too, the mere authorization to apply such controls might induce bankers to take steps to restrict such loans of their own volition.

All these plans for tightening credit serve the dual purpose of relieving inflationary pressures on the economy and releasing materials for production of military equipment. They will not, of course, prevent a general rise in prices and living costs, unless steps are taken to offset increases in the Federal budgetary deficit brought about by an unexpected expansion of military spending. The President is requesting approximately 10 billion dollars more for defense purposes. That sum, added to a prospective deficit in the neighborhood of five billion dollars, would lay the foundation for runaway inflation unless taxes are raised. Tax increases are in fact, as the President says, "our basic weapon in offsetting the inflationary pressures exerted by enlarged Government expenditures." And it is important to remember that heavier taxes make direct controls over prices and rationing less necessary.

Civilian Government agencies have been instructed to review their spending program for the purposes of cutting down outlays that compete with the military for manpower and scarce materials. It is to be hoped that Congress will take steps to see that substantial economies are effected by such means. At this juncture, however, it is impossible to estimate with any approach to accuracy the effect of the expanded military program. The one thing that is certain is that the 1951 deficit will be large enough to make higher taxes imperative. For that reason we hope that Congress will not adjourn until it has voted for an increase in taxes that will be at least sufficient to offset the inflationary effect of the larger expenditures that lie ahead.

Stronger U. N.

I would like to challenge some of the statements made by Mr. Omar B. Ketchum (of the Veterans of Foreign Wars) in his letter of July 14 denouncing the United World Federalists.

Mr. Ketchum considers the United World Federalists proposal one of "disarmament." He calls it an organization which proposes to "bypass" and is at "cross-purposes" with the United Nations.

May I call to his attention the full page ad which appeared in The Washington Post, June 30, (only four days after the Korean outbreak) sponsored by the United World Federalists—which supported and commended the swift action taken by the U. N. in the Korean situation?

The United World Federalists have always supported the United Nations in its efforts to keep the peace. But Federalists realize that the U. N. must be more powerful if it is to meet future crises.

As stated in the ad, "The United Nations will permanently possess the power of peace only when it has at its command a strong, ever-vigilant world police force . . . composed in fair measure of men from all nations—controlled by a Security Council with veto-free authority—checked by the World Court and by explicit Charter prohibitions against any infringement of the reserved rights of member nations—capable of arresting the individuals responsible for violating U. N. Assembly laws against aggression, so that weapons of war beyond those required to maintain domestic tranquility cannot be prepared secretly and used openly, as by the Communists on the Korean peninsula."

Does this sound like a proposal of disarmament? Does it bypass or is it at cross-purposes with the United Nations?

Rather, is it not a proposal to give the United Nations a transfusion of new and stronger blood—so that in future crises it will be ready to meet aggression with law, order and force if necessary?

Voter Understanding

In her perceptive article of July 12, "Campaign Lie Defense," Malvina Lindsay notes the need for greater understanding on the part of the voter if he is to make a well-reasoned choice at the polls.

While the press is in many instances to blame for not providing a fully rounded view of great national and world issues, there is no gainsaying the fact that voters too often are ill-informed through sheer indifference. How many of us really take the required time needed to arrive at sane, unemotional conclusions? Are we not inclined to put such matters off until election eve, much in the manner of youngsters cramming for their examinations?

Clearly, each of us is under obligation not only to ponder the issues but to encourage his neighbor to arrive at intelligent political decisions, whatever his party predilections. To that end, nothing could be more effective than the formation of free public discussion groups where all shades of opinion may be openly aired. In New York, we are fortunate enough to have the Cooper Union forum where, without cost, ideas can be expressed three evenings each week both from the platform and by the listeners in the auditorium during the discussion period.

Too few of America's great metropolitan areas possess similar facilities, unfortunately. Here, quite evidently, is the starting point for any really thoroughgoing effort to turn individual apathy into thoughtful participation in our governmental processes.

Bypassing The Veto

Now that the United States has at last taken a responsible lead in world affairs, should we not go further and consolidate our positive gains? For the first time in history an international flag is being carried on the battlefield. And I, for one, am proud that American soldiers are the first to carry it.

The Security Council's decision on Korea could never have been reached if Russia had not been "sitting it out". For a long time we have been fretting about how to bypass the Soviet veto—now she has given us a golden opportunity. Should we not accept it and proceed further in collective security by taking the initiative now to unite those U. N. member nations which backed the Korean decision. Such an act would not be contrary to the spirit or letter of the U. N. charter, since Article 51 provides for groups of nations federating within the U. N. framework.

Source Of Aggression

Korea, has to a small extent, electrified the American people like Pearl Harbor. However, Korea is not a part of this country and the lesson is not yet completely understood. The Communist aggression is against the mind and the liberties of individuals. If individual liberty and freedom is to exist anywhere in this world, it must exist everywhere. Korea is just the Charlie McCarthy of an unscrupulous master.

If it is geography that is necessary for us to comprehend aggression, let us draw our toe in the sand around Yugoslavia and sign a mutual defense pact with them. If the Cominform persists, in light of our declared intentions to resist further Communist territorial aggressions, let us not slap at the Bulgarian puppets with a fly-swatter but let us eliminate the source of the puppet manipulators with a sledge hammer blow in the form of a few well placed A-bombs or H-bombs.

China In The U. N.

If the United States wishes to be honest, and mature of judgment, how can it postpone recognizing the government of Mao-Tse-tung in the Security Council? How can we hope to lead the world in a crusade for fair dealing, if we refuse recognition of a regime established after a long and honest fight against an intolerably corrupt government? Trygve Lie, Nehru, and many Americans have urged that we take this step in the United Nations.

If our policy-makers have the vision to take this step they will be derided at first by those nonthinkers who simply "see red" at any version of the word "Communist." But what a lift they would instantly give the international prospect!

Clean Milk

May a puzzled member of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association say this: If I drank milk in the District I would keep two things in mind while all the argument is going on. (a) Is it clean? and (b) how much does it cost?

My experience and all that I have ever read or heard proves that the District has the cleanest milk supply of any city in the United States with the possible exception of San Francisco. I think that is remarkable and something to make one feel good, be he producer or consumer.

My experience tells me that the price of milk per quart to the consumer in the District does not vary more than a fraction of a cent from that in the major milk markets of the United States.

If there is a change made, have the consumers been promised cheaper milk? Or cleaner milk? What the consumer will get is a much cheaper quality at the same price.

There has been much talk about what Maryland and Pennsylvania are doing. Don't forget that the milk supply for the District is far superior. There are plenty of barns where the pigs and cows are housed along with the horses and chickens, where the cows' udders drag in manure, where a tea kettle of hot water in the kitchen is the entire supply. Ask your wife how much hot water she'd want to wash several 10-gallon milk cans, buckets, strainers, milkers and the rest of the equipment. She won't get it out of a 10-gallon electric water heater.

Do be suspicious of the motives of those who want a change. Remember this: They can't inspect those farms too much when I am one of the customers. I like milk, I like it clean from the cow, and Washington gets more of that kind of milk than any other city in the country.

More Tax Revenue

The current world situation not only requires the abandonment of all ideas concerning tax reduction but it must also inevitably focus attention on the necessity for raising additional revenues somewhere. While such action should not be taken precipitously, why shouldn't the Congress, as a first step, enact a measure embodying those provisions of the current "balanced" tax revision bill which are designed to plug existing loopholes?

These levies have already been the subject of extensive hearings and, by definition, they would do no more than place certain persons and organizations on an equal tax footing with everyone else. Certainly there could be no objection to raising much-needed additional revenue in this manner.

The present situation would also seem to call for a reexamination of the decision not to reduce the unjustifiable and outrageous depletion allowances now being granted to various special interests, notably those which own and operate oil wells.

Salvaging 'Lost' Leaders

By Malvina Lindsay

Catching Them Early

"THINGS LOOK serious," said the little man with the turned down mouth. He sighed. "If only we had some great leaders." The ever familiar cry in time of trouble! Voiced no doubt in 1775. Certainly in 1860.

Most of those who make this periodic call for leaders are visioning a few top geniuses (as of 1787), perhaps even the single commanding figure on horseback. But the need of a republic of 150 million people is for leaders in bulk, to wield grassroots influence.

The critical years looming ahead especially demand such men and women in public affairs, science, social relationships. Hence the recent plea of the Educational Policies Commission for more national effort to develop specially gifted youth—the potential leaders—has great urgency.

One is likely to think of the estimated 10 percent of gifted children in terms of science, as potential discoverers and inventors. But the gifted group also includes those who might become outstanding artists, teachers, social workers, physicians, members of Congress, Governors, mayors—all types of persons who would greatly enrich their communities and their Nation.

MUCH OF this talent is being wasted, partly because gifted children are neglected in the educational system. Not even all of the 1 percent of highly gifted children have opportunity to develop their gifts. Possibly this is one reason party leaders so often look about desperately for promising candidates to groom for important public posts.

Dangerous times often call forth the genius of the few. Yet they also result in many key posts being manned by mediocrities—simply because more capable persons with necessary training are not available.

For, as the two-year study of the Educational Policies Commission points out, many gifted children drop out of school too early—often because they can't afford to go on, sometimes through boredom with a school routine geared to the good of the average, giving its special services to the retarded.

What is becoming a dangerous trend in this country—the obsession to fit the average mold—is cited in this study. This attitude, which discourages development of leadership, was also underlined recently by several foreign students who had completed a year of study at Middlebury College. Their chief criticism of American students was their eagerness to be "average guys" and not deviate from the national pattern—hence their failure to make the most of college opportunities.

American social attitudes have had much to do with the neglect of the gifted. Americans tend to belittle those endowed with exceptional abilities, the report of the Educational Policies Commission points out. They do not insist on having persons of high ability in positions of influence and leadership. The commission believes this "social resistance to accepting the leadership of the gifted . . . springs in part from a misapplication of our national tradition of human equality."

THIS attitude is deeply imbedded. For all the cry for great national leaders in time of stress, there is the cry in time of campaign for the homespun candidate with whom the voter can identify himself. Also latent is the easily stirred resentment of "perfessers," of the reputed intellectual and social polish of State Department employes, of the esoteric knowledge of atomic scientists, of any obvious attainment of the mind.

Yet despite this equality fetish, the caste system is solidifying. For, as the commission points out, leaders in business and the professions are being recruited increasingly from upper income groups who can afford college education.

How then is leadership to be opened to the gifted rather than merely the well-to-do? By waking up the public to its great stake in the development of its richest national resource—human talent. By arousing parents and teachers to seek out and encourage the gifted child. By inducing national and State governments to provide scholarships for those showing great promise.

Possibly some of the public's distrust of the intellectual is based on his traditional lack of human understanding. The commission recognizes this danger. In its program for the education of the gifted it would make character education important. For, as it says, "leaders in a democracy need more than intelligence and knowledge and skills. They need character, of which perhaps the principal ingredients are personal integrity, human sympathy and a sence of social responsibility."

"Pale Potomac Moon"

I was surprised to see in your issue of July 16, a headline in Section IV: "Nobody Has Time To Write Songs About the Potomac." Surprised, because in the same issue was an article about my old friend, Arthur Godfrey, who, I recall, once wrote a song called "Pale Potomac Moon," which had quite a vogue in these parts in the mid '30s. At any rate, he sang it a lot on his WJSV program, and at gatherings with such Navy fellow banjo players as Slim Beecher, Bob Berry, and myself.

Yours for bigger and better Potomac balladry!

...Y MAKING it clear to the wh... world that our objective in...Korea is a United Nations se...lement, we shall strengthen an... simplify our position. We sh... disassociate ourselves from th... idea that we are fighting to k... Korea partitioned. The K...ean people in the south as w... as in the north can never re...ard partition as anything but an... evil. We shall remove also th... sinister accusation that we ar... fighting to keep the southern ha... of Korea as an American m...tary base. By committing the settlement of the Korean problem to the U. N. we shall destroy the accusation that the U. N., in the absence of the Soviet Union and of Red China, has been reduced to an instrument of American military policy. It is difficult to exaggerate the importance of our convincing the uncommitted nations of Asia and the great masses of the people everywhere that MacArthur is in truth fighting under the U. N. flag and not behind it.

THE BEST way to prove it is to invite the United Nations to go to work on, not only a way to end the fighting but, an over-all settlement for Korea. This means the creation of a government in an Asiatic country which is just beginning to achieve its independence, and that the statesmen of the independent nations of Asia should take the lead in working out proposals.

We should explain to them that we are prepared to accept as the basis of negotiations any proposals for Korea which are agreed to by the leading independent statesmen of Asia. In fact we should take the position that it is not merely the right of the governments of India and of Pakistan to work out proposals for a settlement. It is their duty to do it. They are the leading independent powers of Asia, and theirs is the responsibility for discovering and arranging through the United Nations for the kind of settlement which the peoples of Asia will accept and will come to like. We shall be glad to follow in the affairs of Asia the governments which are themselves independent. Inside Asia we have no interests that run contrary to and are not promoted by the fullest independence of the Asian states acting in their foreign affairs within the framework of the United Nations.

IT SEEMS to me that a firm and well developed American commitment to an over-all Korean settlement by the United Nations—not merely to an armistice at the thirty-eighth parallel—would be a sincere and honorable way of proving our intentions. The best reply to the "peace offensives" is to make a contribution to peace.

So deep a commitment to the U. N. may make it possible for the Security Council to unsnarl the tangle of Chinese representation. It is true that Red China cannot be seated as a reward, or as the ransom, for ending the Korean aggression. The dignity of the U. N. would be gravely injured if that were the outcome. But it is also true that there is a close connection between the Korean problem and the Chinese problem. Mr. Truman recognized that even before Stalin talked about it when he neutralized Formosa as he intervened in Korea.

President Truman's Formosan action does not have the approval of the U. N. It can be justified under the U. N. policy, however, as a necessary means to localize the Korean war. It would follow, therefore, that a Korean settlement by the U. N. would lead to a U. N. intervention in the Formosan question.

President's Message

By Marquis Childs

Belt Tightening Vs. Expansion

PRESIDENT Truman's message should find an immediate and welcome response in the country. It is what most of us have been waiting for—a calm yet forceful statement of the issues together with a program to create American strength in being above and beyond the immediate needs for Korea.

Childs

The President has refused to be stampeded into hasty and perhaps unwise action. His are the words of a man determined to proceed with a grim and fateful task; in recognition of an evil that can no longer be ignored.

In some respects the President's recommendations go further than had been anticipated. The 10 billions requested for rearmament is twice the amount that had been predicted. As a matter of fact the sum was not finally agreed to until late Tuesday night, long after the main elements of the message were assembled.

Military advisers pressed for the larger amount and they carried the day. Likewise they argued for the right to call up, if necessary, all the National Guard. In a next-to-final draft authorization had been limited to "certain selected units."

How the Kremlin will respond to the President's declaration is something else again. On that reaction may well depend whether the Korean conflict spreads to the entire world. The little group of men who exercise absolute rule over so many millions of people could decide that the creation of American strength in being was too great a threat to the superiority in military striking power that they now wield.

THE SIGN of such a decision would probably be additional Communist attacks at tension points—Iran, Yugoslavia, Indo-China with the immediate use of Chinese Communist armies in the Korean war. The Truman message frankly recognizes that this may happen.

On the whole there was remarkable agreement among the various advisers helping to shape the program. They were generally for the middle course between the extremes of "all-out mobilization" and the wait-to-see-what-happens theory.

If a party struggle develops over the economic controls the President will request at a later date, the conservatives are bound to center their fire on one particular point in the program. That is the recommendation for "production loan guarantees and loans to increase production." This is in order to "accelerate and increase the production of essential materials, products and services."

Back of this is the thinking of Chairman Leon Keyserling of the President's Council of Economic Advisers and others who for more than two years have been urging an increase in facilities to produce steel and other essentials. In line with this argument was the suggestion, which stirred a tempest of debate: that the Government might have to finance the construction of steel plants in order to get sufficient steel capacity.

AS ONE result of the whole controversy, Keyserling became the No. 1 Demon of conservative business interests. But whatever one thinks of the Keyserling school, and many including esteemed economists think less than nothing of it, the fact is that growing shortages of the past six months have seemed to prove the point that basic productive capacity was not sufficient for an expanding economy.

While it is an oversimplification to put it this way, the debate in coming weeks is likely to be between the belt tightening sacrifices for all groups and those who argue the need to expand productive capacity for both war and peace. Keyserling has repeatedly urged expansion of the economy at an annual rate of 3 percent in order to provide new jobs for new job seekers who come into the market in ever increasing numbers.

Even if the Korean war is localized, it is bound to be drawn out and the belt tightening school will have powerful emotions on their side. But they will also have a serious handicap. Among them, for example, are earnest Republicans who have always stood for international cooperation and assistance.

But other Republicans, both more numerous and more influential in their party, are likely to balk at even the limited allocations and priorities which the President will recommend in a later message. They are talking about voluntary controls in the face of the price gouging already taking place.

It is such talk from those who may be able to veto any and all controls that makes the belt tightening line sound unreal. In trying to map a middle ground position, the President has taken what seems to me to be a sane and reasonable course and I believe he will have wide support in the country.

and only 25 in Grade 18 ($14,000 flat.)

The entire 400 jobs have been allocated by both the President and the Civil Service Commission. They were chosen from nearly 1000 jobs recommended by the various agencies.

With a new and larger defense program about to get underway, the Administration will attempt to bring back here scores of officials who operated the World War II agencies. Many former War Production Board officials already have been contacted to determine if they would be available. It would be easier to persuade them to return if they coulld be paid higher salaries. In addition, many of the key people already in Government would be in line for pay boosts if Congress wipes out the salary restriction.

The President also asked that Section 14 of the 1946 Pay Act be waived. This provision requires the Budget Bureau to fix quarterly ceilings on the number of employes each Federal agency may have. Officials say it's impossible to foretell how many civilians the war and other agencies will need in these days of fast-breaking developments.

Furthermore, the President's program would affect Federal employes in these ways:

The Commerce Department would be given the authority to carry out his plan to establish priorities and to allocate war materials. Many persons recently laid off from its Bureau of Foreign & Domestic Commerce would be recalled to their jobs if the program is approved. Commerce officials already are making plans to take on the new work.

Federal agencies in the construction field such as Public Roads, General Services Administration and Civil Aeronautics Administration among others have started to restudy their expansion plans in a move to save manpower and materials as directed by the President.

Maritime is recalling employes laid off not so long ago to get merchant ships out of storage and to recondition them. The agency also is working on a program that would greatly expand its operations.

The Marine Corps headquarters here is replacing 400 of its military people with civilians. Needed immediately are status clerks in Grades 2, 3 and 4, and temporary typists and stenographers. Make your application at the Marine Civilian Personnel Office, Room 4231 of the Arlington Navy Annex.

Rumors raced through a dozen Federal agencies here yesterday that they were to be transfered out of this city to make room for a big expansion of the war agencies.

There was no official confirmation of any definite plans to further decentralize the Government. However, the problem has been studied by the National Security Resources Board and the Budget Bureau.

Among the agencies where employes speculated on being moved out were the Patent Office, Federal Deposit Insurance, General Accounting Office, Federal Power Commission, and some parts of the Army and Navy.

A score of agencies with about 30,000 employes were moved out of this city in the early days of World War II to make room for the war agencies.

The military agencies—Army, Navy, and Air Force—will have the greatest personnel expansion under the President's program. They, too, will need hundreds of new civilians merely to replace uniformed personnel called into active military duty. Since the services are unified, they will probably set up a central office here to recruit civilians for all of them. In other words, they will stop competing against one another for personnel.

Into Each Life Here Too Much Rain Falls

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Into each life some rain must fall, the song says, and around Washington, 5 will get you 10 it'll rain between 4 and 6 p. m.

That is just in time to catch you if you get off five-ish, want to play a few holes of golf before dark, plan to eat an early dinner downtown and catch a show, or have just finished an afternoon at the beauty parlor.

But that's what the Weather Bureau says, after 75 years of contending with the vagaries of this here climate. Especially in July, when it precipitates only a soupcon from 8 a. m. to noon and saves up for the late afternoon and early evening.

Actually, during most of the spring and summer months, it is a 4-to-6 p.m. deal on the rain, while in the winter months, it can and does rain any old time here.

The Weather Bureau has put out a climatic handbook for Washington with this and other information but it warns right away: "It is not expected that this publication will provide the complete solution of all individual problems in which climate and weather affect human activity."

Well, natch. Whoever heard of putting a golf course indoors?

"Washington," it says, "is located too close to the Atlantic Ocean and Gulf of Mexico with reference to the general circulation of atmosphere for long spells of dry weather to be common."

It also says, "Long spells of humid weather are not common at Washington." Honest. Also not common are tropical hurricanes and 10 feet of snow.

Pretty common is Dense Fog, but it usually only stays around about 12 hours.

July is the hottest month around here, although back in August, 1918, it went up to 106 one day. And back in February, 1899, it went down to 15 below.

From one of the three zillion charts in the handbook, you can assume that it rains more at the Zoo than lots of other places in town.

For instance, back on September 4, 1939, the WB measured rainfall at 15 points in and around Washington for a two-hour period and found 4.14 inches at the Zoo, as compared with 3.18 inches at the National Training School for Boys, 3.45 inches at the Terrestial Magnetism Division of the Carnegie Institute of Washington, 2.95 inches at the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains and 3.84 inches at the Weather Bureau.

During a 41-year period, there have never been more than seven days in a row that the sun shone at full strength all the time it was up. Back in 1945, for instance, Washingtonians got only 54 percent of "possible sunshine."

The earliest the sun ever gets up around here is 4:42 a. m. about the middle of June and it never stays out later than 7:38 p. m. (EST). However, it sometimes doesn't get up until 7:28 a. m. but that is right after New Year's.

During the spring, summer and autumn, we get most of our wind from the south, but when winter comes, we get it from both northwest and north. Back in July, 1911, we had a 77-mile-per-hour wind.

On the average, we have 8.6 thunderstorms each July, but we have had as many as 16, back in 1931 and as few as four, in 1924.

We have had a killing frost as early as October 21, in 1930 and 1940, and likewise as late as April 24.

The handbook calls the snowstorm of January 27-29, in 1922, the "greatest snowstorm in the meterological history of Washington." This was the storm during which the Knickerbocker Theater roof collapsed killing 98 and injuring 102.

Back in April, 1918, it rained for 94 hours continuously in Washington except for the time during that period when it either snowed or sleeted. The WB measured three inches of snow.

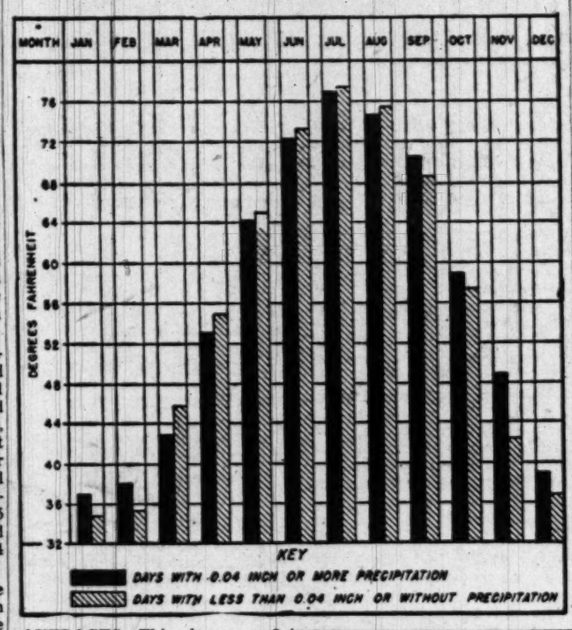
The highest water stage of record at the Leiter gauge on the Potomac was on March 19, 1936, while at the Wisconsin ave. gauge it was on October 17, 1942.

Jams Kind of Rare

The Weather Bureau explained that ice jams on the Potomac are rare, but back in February, 1918, there was one that broke up at 2 a. m., formed a gorge from Chain Bridge nearly to the Aqueduct Bridge, and finally carried away about 600 feet of the Long Bridge and flooded the lower portion of the city. People used boats to get around at the Baltimore & Potomac Depot.

The climatic handbook on Washington is an outgrowth of the War Advisory Council on Meteorology which the Weather Bureau organized during the war. The council prepared analyses of 26 different localities in war zones as weather guides, which were used in planning military operations. The Weather Bureau decided the method of presentation used then "could serve many useful peacetime purposes."

Temperatures—Rain or Not



AVERAGES—This is one of the charts included in the climatic handbook put out by the Weather Bureau dealing with Washington climate for the past 75 years. The graph indicates average temperatures from 1905 to 1945; the heavy lines when 0.04 inch or more of rain fell and the light lines the days with less than 0.04 or no rain

Hearings Set On Fairfax's Government

Details of four hearings to consider changing Fairfax County's form of government were announced yesterday by the 21-member commission now studying the problem.

On July 25, the Federation of Fairfax County Civic Associations will be heard in the first session, the Committee Opposed to County Manager System during the second.

On July 28, the Fairfax County League of Women Voters, first session, and county officials, including the Commonwealth's attorney, sheriff, and chief of police, second session.

On August 1, the Taxpayers Advisory Association, first session, and county officials such as the treasurer and commissioner of revenue, second session.

At the final meeting August 4, the Committee for Good Government, first session, and county officials, including the director of health, school board chairman, and welfare board head, second session.

Play Areas Entered in Montgomery Contest

Thirty off-street play areas have been entered by Montgomery County parents in the 1950 summer yard contest, it was announced yesterday.

Stephen James, chairman of the county Safety Board, said the competition will end September 1 when $150 in cash prizes will be awarded.

The contest is the second annual effort of the Safety Board, the County Council, school and police officials to end traffic accidents to children during their school vacation period.

No child was killed in a traffic accident in Montgomery County last year, during the first time the contest was sponsored, James said, though three children were killed the year before, and one so far this year.

The contest requires parents to set aside a yard or part of a yard, and equip it for child play. Five cash prizes of $25, $20, $15, $10 and $5 each are to be awarded to the parents who construct the most attractive off-street play yards at the smallest cost; while a similar set of five prizes will be awarded to a group of parents who develop a neighborhood or block play yard contributing most to the safety of children of the area, at the smallest cost.

James said parents who entered the contest last year are invited to reenter, provided they have made improvements in their play yards.

"BEHIND THE BAR" TEST CONVINCES EXPERTS

"Can you taste the difference?" we asked Washington bar owners. Behind the bar we filled a glass with Old Georgetown Beer poured from a bottle.

Another glass was filled with Old Georgetown draft beer from the keg. "Can you taste the difference between Draft and Bottled?" we asked.

One glass . . . then the other . . . was tasted. In every case the answer was the same. "Both have that good draft beer taste!"

If you agree draft beer tastes better—prove to yourself Old Georgetown really gives you draft beer flavor in bottles and cans. Make this test—today!

200,000-Acre Site For H-Plant Sought

By The Associated Press

The Atomic Energy Commission is picking out a place to build the hydrogen bomb, but it hasn't disclosed where.

Word that the site for an H-bomb factory is being chosen came from a subcommittee of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee. It issued a brief statement yesterday saying that the site may include as much as 200,000 acres (more than 300 square miles) and that an important element is selection of a location that would "minimize its vulnerability to enemy attack."

The subcommittee said it is not planning to build a new Government-owned community in connection with the plant. There are such communities at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Los Alamos, N. Mex. There was no explanation why the Government does not contemplate construction of an H-bomb city.

While the statement, issued by Representative Durham (D., N. C.), the subcommittee chairman, did not mention the hydrogen weapon directly, it did say that facilities will be constructed on the site "to carry out the President's directive of January 31, 1950.

That directive gave the official go-ahead for the super bomb.

Compromise

Senate Chiefs Draft Bill on Subversives

Senate Democratic leaders are working on a compromise anti-subversive bill aimed primarily at Communists and embracing some features of the controversial Mundt-Ferguson bill, it was revealed yesterday.

Informed sources said the plan favored by policy leaders would not embrace all of the Republican bill and probably would be patterned after the less stringent internal security bill passed by the House.

Administration sources said the cratic Policy Committee meeting Tuesday. It was to be considered by a pary conference yesterday.

Assistnt Attorney General Peyton Ford met with the policy committee Tuesday.

Social Worker Fired On Probe Testimony

Cincinnati, Ohio, July 19 (U.P.)—County welfare officials fired a local social worker, Miss Sarah Pilder, 26, today on the ground that testimony before the House un-American Activities Committee labeled her a Communist.

Welfare Director Frederick A. Breyer said there was no doubt that the woman was the same person named in Washington as a Communist. The removal order was effective July 31.

He said Miss Pilder refused to answer the question whether she was a member of the Communist Party. Earlier she had signed a statement and affidavit that she was not a Communist. She had been with the welfare division since April, 1948.

FBI Charges Denied by A-Spy Suspect

New York, July 19 (AP).—Julius Rosenberg laughed off the Government's spy charge against him today and compared them to a children's cowboy program on television.

"There is not one iota of truth in the charges," the 32-year-old imprisoned engineer told his attorney, Enanuel H. Bloch.

Rosenberg, arrested by the FBI Monday night, is held in $100,000 bail. He is charged with conspiracy to commit espionage.

The Government indicated today it may not proceed against Rosenberg before a grand jury at once. It was understood additional arrests may be in the offing.

The FBI said Rosenberg recruited his brother-in-law, David Greenglass into a Russian-backed spy ring that furnished atom bomb secrets to Soviet agents in 1945.

Greenglass was arrested a month ago. Two other alleged members of the ring were arrested about the same time.

The FBI said Rosenberg gave Greenglass half of a torn jello box top. It was to be matched with the other half in the hands of another spy suspect as an identification signal.

Block said Rosenberg "Laughed out loud" at this cloak-and-dagger charged by the FBI.

"He called it fantastic," the attorney said, "something like his kids hear over the television on the Lone Ranger program."

Bill Bans Communism

Buenos Aires, Argentina, July 19 (U.P.)—A bill outlawing communism in Argentina was introduced in the Chamber of Deputies today by four members of the Peronist majority.

Showdown Due Today On M'Carthy

By the United Press

Senate Republicans yesterday temporarily blocked the filing of a Democratic report accusing Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) of "fraud and a hoax" for charging the State Department is Communist infiltrated.

A showdown on the bitterly partison issue was scheduled for today when GOP Floor Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) will present a motion to send the controversial report back to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Wherry's motion—which was given little chance of approval—would instruct the committee to report out a substitute resolution providing for a new investigation of McCarthy's charges by an "independent" bipartisan commission.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the five-member Foreign Relations subcommittee that first looked into the charges, predicted he will succeed in formally filing the critical report signed by himself and two other Democratic members.

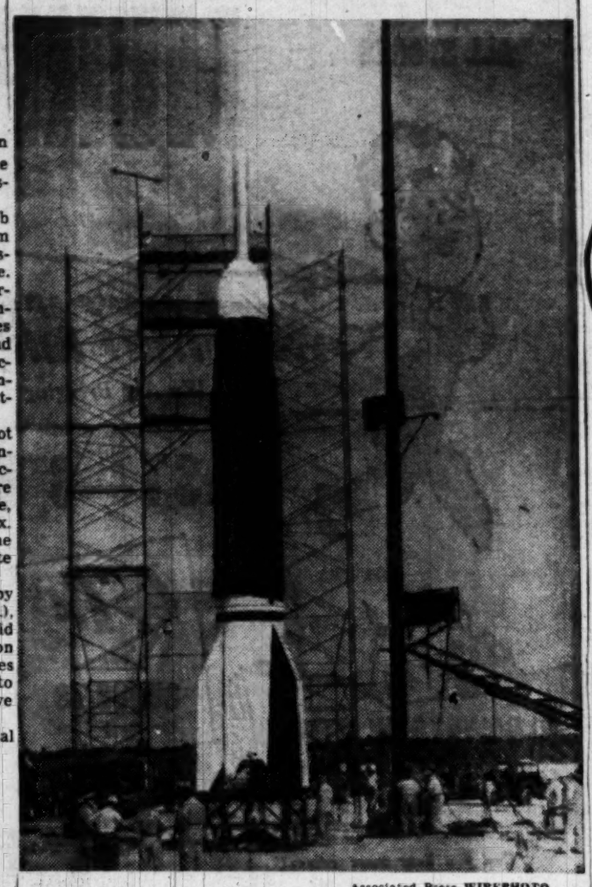
Unanimous consent was required for filing the report yesterday, and Tydings' effort to do so was blocked by Wherry and Sen. Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio).

Today, however, the Senate will meet in the so-called "morning hour" and the rules will permit Tydings to file the report unless Wherry can muster a majority vote for his resolution to toss it back to the committee..

The proposal for an independent commission to investigate communism in the Government originated with Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., (R., Mass.), one of the two GOP members who bitterly protested the majority report of the Tydings subcommittee.

Lodge said the subcommittee's investigation was "completely inadequate."

Newest Rocket Fizzles Out . . .



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

"IT DIDN'T LIFT"—After nine hours of on-and-off waiting, gathered Army brass at Long Range Proving Ground, Cocoa, Fla., saw a small footing of feathered smoke leave the double-headed 250,000-pound rocket then a voice bellow mournfully: "The missle did not lift." The 60-foot long range, low angle guided rocket was expected to go no higher than 25 miles on an estimated 300-mile flight over the Atlantic during the test. Officials said they'd try again

Reds Said to Have H-Bomb

Paris, July 19 (U.P.)—The co-chief of France's atomic projects said today that Russia, through its espionage network, certainly has obtained the "know-how" to make the hydrogen bomb.

Francis Perrin, Joint Commissioner for Atomic Energy, added, however, the Soviets probably would not try to produce the superbomb because it would drain Russia's economy and industrial potential.

The United States, Perrin said, is "the only nation capable of manufacturing the H-bomb and still maintaining a normal economic standard."

Perrin said he did not believe atomic bombs could destroy the earth "right now," but added gravely:

"If the atomic race is continued for perhaps 10 years, hundreds of bombs might be supplemented by thousands on both sides. A great number of atomic explosions could poison the earth."

Britain Is 'Disturbed' By Suspected Sabotage

London, July 19 (U.P.)—W. J. Edwards, Civil Lord of the Admiralty, told Commons today that Britain was "very disturbed" about a number of cases of suspected abotage in naval vessels.

A questioner had spoken of "public disquiet" over eight instances of possible sabotage since June 1 on an aircraft carrier, four destroyers, two submarines and in the explosion of eight ammunition barges at Portsmouth Friday.

Arlington to Care For Child Pending Custody Suit Ruling

The estranged parents of 5-year-old Max U. L. Lent, jr., agreed yesterday to leave the child with the Arlington Welfare Department, pending settlement of a custody dispute.

The child's mother, Mrs. Mary V. Lent, 28, of Athens, Ohio, has charged her Army sergeant husband with "conniving" to place her illegally in a Walter Reed Hospital psychiatric ward for five days in order to take the child away.

A hearing was held yesterday in Arlington Circuit Court, in response to a habeas corpus petition served last week on Sergeant Lent, at his South Post, Fort Myer quarters. It ordered him to produce the child.

The hearing, before Judge Walter T. McCarthy, was confined, by agreement, to the question of whether Mrs. Lent be allowed to visit the child before permanent custody is determined. No divorce suit now is pending.

A Walter Reed psychiatrist, Dr. Stewart Baker, testified that Mrs. Lent entered the hospital voluntarily July 8 for treatment. He said her case was eventually diagnosed as "schizophrenia, paranoid type, chronic, and moderately severe," and explained this means "she has a basic difficulty in understanding reality relationships."

Mrs. Lent testified her husband, who dropped a previous divorce suit against her, had renewed his requests for a divorce within the past three weeks. She said her sister, Miss Betty Glass of Athens, received a letter from Lent "saying he would put me away if I didn't give him a divorce." The letter was introduced in evidence.

Mrs. Lent explained she came to Washington with her son July 6 after a three-month seperation from her husband, thinking they would "either come to an understanding or quit it for good."

She said her husband persuaded her to visit a "marriage counselor" at Walter Reed, where she was then detained five days without her consent. Her release July 13 was at her attorney's insistence, she said.

The hearing resumes at 10 a. m. today.

"ALL GREATER WASHINGTON'S FRIENDLY STORES"

One Passes, 8 Fail Area Draft Tests

The first draft candidates from the Washington area were given preinduction physical and mental examinations yesterday. Nine men took the tests. Eight failed.

Thus, the lone survivor, Leroy Hanson, 24, a laborer, is potentially No. 1 among the draftees of this area who will be inducted into the Army under the recent Selective Service call for 20,000 fit fighting men.

Hanson, a native of Washington, lives in Marlboro, Md. He works here for a brick contractor. Whether Hanson will in fact turn out to be the first inductee from this area depends on final medical clearance.

The nine selectees, all Negroes, were called up by the LaPlata (Charles County) draft board. They are principally tobacco farm workers or construction laborers. One is 26, one year older than the legal draft age limit; another is married and father of a one-year-old child, also exempt under the present Selective Service Act. The youngest is 22. They have little or no schooling. Four are illiterate. Eight failed to pass the intelligence test.

The examinations were conducted at the Army Air Force main recruiting station, Arlington Farms, Va., where Capt. William W. Cumbey, of Alexandria, an Army veteran of 21 years, is in charge.

This station will serve as the preinduction center for draftees from Washington and Alexandria; from Montgomery, Prince Georges, Charles, and St. Mary's Counties, Md.; from Arlington, Fairfax, Fauquier, Greene, Madison, Rappahannock, and Page Counties, Va.

Pre induction exams will be held today for 29 selectees from the Hyattsville board. Friday, tests will be given 17 men from Upper Marlboro Board No. 57. On Monday, 50 District residents will undergo the examinations.

Other examinations will be held next week for selectees from Silver Spring, Chevy Chase-Bethesda, Rockville, Arlington County, Fairfax County, and Alexandria.

Meanwhile, Frank Norton, deputy director of District Selective Service, yesterday urged all draft registrants to notify their boards by postcard of any changes in address or marital status. All 15 boards are located in Temporary Building No. 2, at 1901 D st. nw.

PHYLLIS BEARDSLEY, Los Angeles, Calif., clothes designer, yesterday won a divorce from Paul Beardsley, television actor-producer. She won custody of their daughter, Kim, 3½; $10,000 in cash and alimony. The designer testified she found her husband taking a shower with an airline hostess

D. C. Boy, 16, Charged With Manslaughter

Arthur Swann, 16-year-old District Training School inmate who has admitted the slaying of a 17-year-old companion, was charged with voluntary manslaughter by Federal authorities in Baltimore yesterday.

Last Sunday Swann led FBI agents to the "practically unrecognizable" corpse of Raymond Thorne, 17, on the grounds of Fort Meade, Md.

Thorne had been missing from the District Training School at Laurel since January 14. Swann, whose home address was listed as 500 Cove st. se., told a rambling story of how he shot Thorne

The mentally defective youth will be arraigned before United States Commissioner Ernest Volkart in Baltimore at 10 a. m. today.

After the hearing, Norman P. Ramsey, assistant United States Attorney for Maryland, will petition Federal Judge Calvin W. Chesnut for a hearing to determine whether the boy is mentally competent to understand the proceedingse against him.

Youth Falls to Death In Cave Exploration

Franklin, W. Va., July 19 (AP)—A family cave exploration ended in tragedy yesterday when an 18-year-old Dayton, Ohio youth plunged 70 to 80 feet to his death.

State Police Corpl. Robert E. Schnell indentified him as Robert Roger Finley.

The youth, with his sister, Marilyn, 20, and brother, George, 21, had come from Dayton to explore caves in the Seneca Caverns region. Robert died when he lost his grip on a rope while some 200 feet below the surface in Schoolhouse Cave. His body was recovered about an hour later.

Maryland Appeals Court Uses New Power In Clearing 3 Charged With Bookmaking

Annapolis, Md., July 19 (AP).—The Court of Appeals exercised its new power to review evidence for the first time today and exonerated three men of a bookmaking charge.

The casualty was a verdict by Judge John B. Gontrum in Baltimore County Circuit Court. He had convicted four men in two separate race-bet cases.

Maryland's high court upheld the verdicts in one case. It agreed with the decision on one defendant in the second case. But in this it reversed convictions of the other three men. This cut in half their fines and sentences.

"There was not sufficient evidence" to find them guilty, Chief Judge Ogle Marbury said in the court's unanimous opinion.

Clearing its docket of all pending cases in a term which began last October, the court also ordered the State to pay a contractor for a jump in costs while construction of Deer's Head State Hospital was delayed.

Contractor J. Roland Dashiell had claimed $254,584 for himself and 20 sub-contractors. He said that would offset an increase in labor and material costs after work was halted by a Civilian Production Administration order in 1946.

Rule 7 of practice and procedure furnished authority for reversing Judge Gontrum.

Adopted only last December, it entitled the Appeals Court to determine whether evidence at a trial conducted by a judge without jury is legally sufficient to justify conviction.

Gontrum had convicted Victor (Froggie) Lambert, John M. Carr, John R. Salfner and Leonard S. Alder after Baltimore County police raided a club cellar at 5912 Liberty rd., last October 26.

Each was sentenced to two years and fined $2000 for bookmaking on October 25 and 26.

Marbury said the court discovered "a paucity of necessary facts" to link Carr, Salfner and Alder with the basement betting room

"The judgements of the lower court, finding them guilty on that date, will have to be reversed," he said.

But of Lambert: "we are unable to say that there is not sufficient evidence to find him guilty on the 25th." His penalty stands.

Cases of 13 In Cafe Dispute Postponed

Disorderly conduct charges against 10 white persons and three Negroes arrested in Sholl's cafeteria, 511 14th st. nw., on Monday, were continued yesterday in Municipal Court until Tuesday, July 25.

Two others, one white and one Negro, members of the group involved in the incident, also were arraigned on similar charges, and their cases continued before Judge Frank H. Myers. It was Myers who ruled last week that Washington restaurants could legally refuse to serve Negroes.

Additional charges under the unlawful entry statute for refusing to leave a private place upon demand were placed against all 15 before Judge Thomas D. Quinn.

Judge Myers released the 15 on $5 collateral which each had posted. Judge Quinn released them on their own recognizance.

The individuals are all members of the Interracial Workshop, 1834 Kalorama rd., nw. They said they were engaged on a "project" to "break down segregation in Washington's restaurants."

The project is sponsored by the Congress on Racial Equality and the Fellowship of Reconciliation, according to George M. Houser, acting spokesman.

Fire Bares Bear

Muncie, Ind., July 19 (AP).—Mickey the bear was a little bare in one spot today. A carelessly tossed cigarette started his fur burning yesterday at the zoo. An attendant grabbed a bucket of lemonade from a picnic table and doused the blaze.

Bear Interest Off Sharply In 30 Days

New York, July 19 (AP).—The short interest in stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange declined more than 600,000 shares in the month ended July 14, the largest since mid-1933 when it dropped a little more than 445,000 shares in a month.

As of that day the short interest outstanding totaled 1,756,026 shares against 2,368,946 outstanding on June 15. The short interest represents stock sold that is not owned in anticipation of borrowing it and buying it later at a lower price.

The largest covering movement occurred in shares of television, radio and motor car manufacturing firms. Among the larger declines were:

Admiral Corp. declined to 29,702 from 56,312; Avoc Mfg. to 30,120 from 38,600; General motors to 24,669 from 35,286; Hudson Motor to 34,306 from 48,861, International Telephone to 13,545 from 26,217; Magnavox to 14,695 from 34,290; Radio Corp. to 38,222 from 61,132; Studebaker to 36,053 from 52,143 and Zenith Radio to 12,173 from 25,638.

The short interest in Sunray Oil increased to 86,977 shares from 60,873 and that in the Southern Co. rose to 16,800 from 1480 a month earlier.

President's Message Spurs 'War Babies' In Stock List

New York, July 19 (AP).—Stock traders liked the President's war message to Congress today.

On the exchange prices of leading stocks rolled ahead for gains of a few cents to more than $3 a share.

Aircraft, automobile, copper, oil and steel issues—all of them war babies—were prime favorites. Selected railway, chemical, industrial and electronic shares also attracted strong support.

The first shock of the President's recommendations sent a shiver of selling through the market. Early gains were chopped down and in some cases eliminated.

The market quickly caught its balance and a morning rise was resumed. Prices were on the way up when the final bell sounded.

Trading volume expanded to 2,430,000 shares, a hefty day's business, from 1,820,000 Tuesday.

Seen As Inflationary

The inflationary implications of the President's proposals made a deep impression on Wall Street. He asked for 10 billion dollars to fight the Korean war and to guard against aggression elsewhere, a huge amount of spending power to impose on an economy that is already working at top speed.

At the same time the President promised sharp tax increases without mentioning specific figures. Higher corporate and individual taxes, plus a corporate excess profits tax, could take a huge chunk of purchasing power out of the economy.

This unknown factor—that is, what tax increases are likely—kept a good many traders out of the market despite the rising price curve.

The President set the market's collective mind at ease on two points: He did not ask for price controls or rationing now. This omission stimulated some buying despite the possibility that these controls might be requested later.

Other controls asked by the President—such as curbs on consumer credit, and priority and allocation power over scarce materials—lined up pretty well with expectations.

War News Is Tonic

In addition to the President's message the market had the tonic of cheering news from Korea, the surprise landing of U. S. troops in force on the east coast of the peninsula.

A surge of buying power in the market on Tuesday, according to Wall Street sources, was based mainly on frontline reports of the stronger stand being made by U. S. forces. Yesterday's rise, on average, was the largest in more than two years.

Issues of aircraft manufacturing companies, which would be in line to benefit from a stepped up rearmament program, put on a brilliant show in the afternoon.

Douglas paced the field with a gain of 3⅝ at 84½. Up more than 1 each were Boeing at 30¾, United 31⅜, Lockheed 33¼, Republic 12, Consolidated Vultee 16⅞, and Glenn Martin 16³⁸.

Up 1 to 2 in the steel-auto divisions were U. S. Steel at 34½, Republic Steel 36½, Youngstown Sheet 89, Armco 37½, General Motors 82³⁸, and Chrysler 66⅞.

In the nonferrous metal department gains of more than a point were posted for Anaconda at 32, Kennecott 59, American Smelting 54½ and Phelps Dodge 52³⁄₄.

Standard Oil (N. J.) jumped 2¼ to 73¾. Texas 2 to 67, Gulf Oil 1½ to 65¾ and Sinclair 1 to 27⅛.

Also higher were Radio Corp., Admiral Corp., North American Aviation, Baldwin Locomotive, American Locomotive, Lima-Hamilton, Studebaker, Emerson Radio, Goodrich, Sears Roebuck, American Telephone, duPont, Union Carbide, American Can, General Electric, American Woolen, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania, Nickel Plate, and Johns-Manville.

World Telegram Makes Guild Offer

New York, July 19 (AP).—The World Telegram and The Sun today gave 400 striking newspaper guildsmen its first formal offer since a strike began five weeks ago.

Talks continued after guild spokesmen said the offer duplicated proposals the newspaper had made informally in previous negotiations.

They said it "does not meet the guild's position."

The offer covered job security, grievance procedure and union security.

But a guild spokesman said the guild withdrew its package proposal after management gave a "flat refusal" to a guild request to "negotiate on everything in both proposals."

B. O. McCanney, managing editor of the Scripps-Howard newspaper, said the management had offered the guild the same job security, grievance and union security clauses as in a new guild contract with the New York Times.

He said the offer includes arbitration of firings, which has been a major issue in the strike.

The New York Times contract is now in arbitration on the issues of wages and duration of the contract, but the Times and the guild have reached agreement on other issues.

Lobby Inquiry

Probers Call Sec. Brannan And Ewing

Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan and Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing were called by the House Lobby Investigating Committee yesterday to tell how they promote their legislative proposals.

Chairman Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.) said the committee decided also to drop its inquiry into the State Department's cocktail parties for Congressmen. No date was set for hearing Brannan and Ewing.

The committee action in effect gave a clean bill to the social sessions sponsored and financed by top State Department officials to keep Congressmen up to date on diplomatic problems.

The forthcoming hearings will cover the recent trip by Ewing, an outspoken advocate of the Administration's compulsory health program, to study Europe's socialized medicine plans.

There have been demands also for a public airing of charges that Brannan used Federal funds to "buy an audience" for a St. Paul, Minn., speech last April in which he plumped for his farm program.

Comptroller General Lindsay Warren has given Buchanan's committee a preliminary report on Ewing's and Brannan's activities. It was not made public, but Warren was said to have ruled that all spending in connection with Brannan's speech were legal and proper.

Buchanan said committee investigators checked up on the State Department's cocktail parties and found the idea originated with two Republican members of a House Appropriations subcommittee — Representatives Gordon Canfield (N. J.) and Karl Stefan (Neb.).

They were said to have suggested closer "off-the-record" contact between members of Congress and Department officials.

Possible Cause Of Cancer Seen in Fungi

Paris, July 19 (AP).—Tiny living plants, present in your body from the day you are born, may be the seeds of later cancer, Dr. Frank Gerlach said today.

He described this theory and his evidence for it to the fifth international cancer research congress. The living plants, he said, are fungi—like the spores that make bread.

Gerlach, an Austrian scientist formerly of Vienna, is director of the Bacteriological Institute of Chile in Santiago. He left Austria in 1948. He was one of four scientists who reported strange connections betwen cancer and fungi.

Gerlach said he had found one tiny form of fungus in every one of several thousand cancers in animals and in human beings.

He said his studies indicated this fungus is present in all persons, right from birth. By itself, it doesn't cause cancer, he said. But when conditions are right, due to injury of the body, hormone upset or other things, he thinks it helps start cancers.

This fungus has many different stages or changes in its life cycle, he added. In one stage, it is very much like a virus, the smallest known disease agents. (Many scientists hold to a theory that viruses cause cancer.)

Gerlach said he has extracted this fungus from cancers and injected it into healthy animals. Four to five percent of them got cancers, he said. This amount is very small to support his theory, but there are several possible reasons why his methods would not produce cancer all the time.

Gerlach said he is seeking a vaccine against the fungus and that, if his theory is right, it would prevent cancer.

Dr. Alfred Neumann of Vienna backed Gerlach's theory that healthy human beings can carry the fungus. But he expressed belief there are several types of cancer fungi, not just one.

Pope Receives U. S. Actor

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, July 19 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XII today received American Actor Lou Costello and his family in private audience at his summer residence.

Plant Repairing B-29s Threatened by Strike

Columbus, Ohio, July 19 (UP).—A strike threat hung today over the sprawling Curtiss-Wright plant where the B-29's are being overhauled for the Air Force.

Employes at the plant here voted almost unanimously in favor of a strike to force wage increases and other benefits patterned after the "GM-Ford-Chrysler package" plan a union official said.

Willard Dobbs, chairman of he union negotiating committee, said the vote, taken last night, will not mean an immediate walkout. First Curtiss-Wright Local 927 of the United Auto Workers (CIO) must obtain permission from Union President Walter P. Reuther to strike.

Workers Threaten To Quit Lewis Union

Baltimore, July 19 (AP).—Striking workers at the Locke, Inc., plant here last night told their top union head—John L. Lewis' brother—to withdraw his suspension of their local president, or they would drop out of the national union.

A. D. Lewis, director of the United Construction Workers, had sent word that J. Edward Whittington, president of the UCW's local at Locke, was being removed from office three days before the strike at Locke started July 10.

Whittington acknowledged he had advised the members to withdraw from the UCW and go into the United Electrical Workers Union, expelled by the CIO last fall on charges it was Communist dominated.

A.T.&T. Long Lines Agreement Ratified

New York, July 19 (AP).—The CIO Communications Workers said today that 21,000 long-lines telephone employes in 40 States have ratified a new agreement with the American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

The agreement was reached a month ago after lengthy and often tense negotiations. It provides no general wage increase but the union said most long lines workers would get from 50 cents to $10 more a week.

UAW, Hudson Motor Sign New Contract

Detroit, July 19 (AP).—The CIO United Auto Workers announced today the signing of a new contract with the Hudson Motor Car Co., providing pensions and an across-the-board wage hike of three cents an hour.

The company, which employs an estimated 20,000 persons, also agreed to a union shop and a check-off of union dues.

Esso Gas Price Hike Starts General Raise

Area gasoline prices started upward yesterday following announcement of an increase by Esso-Standard Oil Co.

Esso-Standard's New York office announced an immediate increase by 2/10 to 5/10 of a cent per gallon, and R. A. Herrick, executive director of the Retail Gasoline Dealers Assn. here, said some retailers raised their price accordingly late yesterday.

Others will increase the retail price today and still others may hold off to see what other companies do, he said.

Herricks said other companies usually follow Esso's lead within a few days. Just how much more motorists will have to pay is the individual dealer's decision, he said.

The oil company said the price increase was due to high consumer demand and a decline in total production, plus its inability to purchase gasoline on the open market cheaply enough to augment its own production.

Goat Given U. S. by Crete Reaches N. Y.

Kri Kri, the fancy goat, arrived in New York yesterday by plane and remained in the goat's Ellis Island—i.e., quarantine—15 days before coming to the Washington Zoo.

Kri Kri, for those who haven't followed his saga, is an agrimi, a very rare type of goat from Crete, and is being given to America by Cretans in appreciation for Marshall Plan aid.

Accompanying Kri Kri was Eftikios Protopappadakis, the bearded islander who found Kri Kri in the mountains when the goat was a little kid and raised him with the help of a nanny goat.

4 Men Arrested In Baltimore as Counterfeiters

Baltimore, July 19 (AP).—The Secret Service charged four men with counterfeiting here today and expressed a belief they had at least dented a ring which has passed thousands of bad $10 bills in several East Coast cities in the last three months.

George C. Drescher, head of the Baltimore Secret Service office, said more than $2000 worth of the bills had been passed here.

The four men charged are Alvin B. Brown, 32; William Davis, alias Diggs, 37; and Leslie D. Pettie, 24, all of Baltimore; and Edward V. Leonard, of Washington.

Drescher said at the arraignment that the counterfeit bills apparently are manufactured in another State. He reported the best break the Secret Service got in the case was when a Brooklyn, N. Y., man and a young woman were arrested at Hopewell, Va., on July 5. Agents found $2600 in counterfeits in the oil filter of their car.

Kerosene Drink Worth $500 to Md. Disc Jockey

Annapolis, Md., July 19 (AP).—The Baltimore disc jockey who swigged kerosene with orangeade will get $500 for his turbulent night and mornings-after.

The Court of Appeals today told Cloverland Farms Dairy to compensate Marvin Ellin for his distress.

Cloverland made the orangeade. Ellin, a radio announcer, brought three bottles at a service station on his way home from work one night. He downed "a rather healthy swig" with his steak sandwich at a midnight snack.

Attorneys said he "immediately choked" and "became violently ill." The next couple of days were no fun, either.

Chemists found traces of kerosene in the bottle.

Ellin sued Cloverland and Andrew East, operator of the service station which sold the pop from an open cooler. A Baltimore Superior Court absolved East but awarded Ellin $500 from Cloverland.

Aged Woman Beaten, Robbed

A 70-year-old woman was bound and gagged by a prowler yesterday when she surprised him as he was ransacking her apartment.

Mrs. Oliver P. M. Brown told police the assault occurred at about 11 a. m. She said she had just entered her apartment, at 4115 Wisconsin ave. nw., when she noticed a dresser drawer in the bedroom had been opened.

When she entered the bedroom the intruder grabbed her by the throat and threw her to the bed. Police said he bound her hands and ankles and gagged and blindfolded her with her undergarments.

The thief took $18 from a billfold and jewelry valued at about $300. He also took Mrs. Brown's keys and locked her apartment when he left.

Mrs. Brown struggled to the window of her second floor apartment and through her gag called for help. A passerby heard her and notified police.

Pvts. David Paul and John W. Kemler, of the Eighth Precinct, opened the apartment door with a pass key and freed Mrs. Brown.

Meanwhile, someone saw the thief hiding in the courtyard of the building. Paul chased the man for several blocks but lost him.

The prowler was described as a medium skinned Negro between 30 and 35, about 5 feet 7, about 150 pounds, wearing a dark blue suit and a light colored hat.

Falling Plank Kills Labor Foreman

A falling plank crushed the skull of a labor foreman on a construction job here yesterday—the second such death on the new Berkshire Apartments at 4201 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Mr. Clarrocchi

Yesterday's victim was Oreste Clarrocchi, 62, of 4019 13th st. nw.

Police said he was standing on the ground when a 14-by-16-foot scafford board fell, apparently from the eighth floor. Workmen were passing the heavy board to the ground by hand from the top of the 11-story project.

Workmen shouted a warning but Calarrocchi couldn't get out of way. He was pronounced dead at the scene by an Emergency Hospital doctor.

On March 6, an 8-by-16-foot plank fell at the same building and killed Jack Jones, 41, an electrician, of 234 Oakwood st. se.

A native of Italy, Clarrocchi had been employed since 1942 by James Kane & Co., plastering contractors. He was a deacon of the Chiesa Dell Redentori Church, 12th and Kirby sts. nw.

He is survived by his wife, Maria; a son, Frank, of Brandywine, Md.; a daughter, Mrs. Jeannette Vasco of Washington, and another daughter who lives in Iowa.

Adventists Call Adultery Sole Divorce Basis

San Francisco, July 19 (AP).—Seventh Day Adventists today reaffirmed that adultery is the only justifiable grounds for divorce—and the guilty party has no right to remarry.

The World Conference of the church approved an executive committee statement that even in cases of adultery efforts should be made toward reconciliation "and repentance of the guilty party, so that the marriage union may be maintained."

"If no reconciliation is effected," the statement added, "the innocent party has the biblical right to secure a divorce and also to remarry."

An unrepentant adulterer "shall be disfellowshiped."

Albert W. Olson of Washington, D. C., headed the committee which formulated the statement.

"We are facing a world in which the influence of the individual is rapidly declining."

That was the theme of today's sermon by W. P. Elliot, chairman of the board of trustees, College of Medical Evangelists, at Los Angeles.

"Manipulation of the masses," he said, "by one means or another, is the order of the day.

"This is an error . . . Men are not born in groups, and men will not be held accountable in groups in the judgment."

Dr. George T. Harding president of the college, reported that for some years the medical school has had four or five times as many qualified applicants as it was able to accept.

Jewish Center Head

Arlington Youths Get 3 of 4 Top Posts in Election

Blacksburg, Va., July 19 (AP).—M. L. Minnick, a Nationalist from Salem, was elected Governor of the American Legion-sponsored Boys' State in a spirited election held here at Virginia Tech late this afternoon.

Barbara Norby of Arlington, a Federalist in Girls State, was elected Governor of that state a little earlier in the afternoon.

Vincent Natti of Arlington, a Federalist, won the office of Lieutenant Governor to serve with Nationalist Minnick. Marion McSurley of Arlington won her race for Lieutenant Governor of Girls State, running as an independent.

Gov. John S. Battle will inaugurate both Governors here Thursday.

There was no apparent reason for the number of Arlington natives placing high up in the voting. Arlington supplied the two states with a Governor, and two Lieutenant Governors.

New Housebreak Investigated by Arlington Police

Another housebreaking attempt in Colonial Village, and an attempted housebreaking in the Arna Valley Development were under investigation last night by Arlington police who fear they may be part of a series of systematic breaks throughout the area.

A total of 35 housebreakings has been reported within two days in Arlington, and seven other breaks have occurred in Alexandria, apparently all the work of the same thief or gang.

Arlington and Alexandria police reported "no arrests" yesterday, though some persons have been questioned and released.

Voters League Lists Deadline For State Absentee Balloting

If President Truman finds it impossible to get to Independence to vote in the Missouri primary August 1, he may cast an absentee ballot since the state has joined 35 others which now permit such voting in primaries.

The Voters Service of the District League of Women Voters noted this in reminding voters that absentee ballot primaries are scheduled in Texas, Saturday; Arkansas, Tuesday; Kansas, Missouri, Virginia and West Virginia, August 1; Tennessee, 3; Idaho and Nebraska, 8; Nevada, September 5; Colorado, Michigan, Vermont and Washington, 12.

Kentucky voters must return lots by Wednesday although the primary will be August 5; Wisconsin voters may ask for ballots starting today for an election September 19; Wyoming after July 23 for August 22 primary; Mississippi after July 29 for August 22 vote; Utah, August 7 for the September 5 primary; Minnesota, August 10 for September 12 primary and Arizona after August 12 for the primary a month later.

Rep. Shafer Wants Reds In U. S. Thrown in Jail

Representative Paul W. Shafer (R., Mich.) said yesterday this country should throw all known Communists into concentration camps.

"The FBI knows who the Communists are," he told the House, "and who the Russian spies are. The FBI knows the identity of nearly all of the fellow travelers.

"They should be outlawed, every last one of them," Shafer said. "We should round them up; put them behind a high fence in concentration camps."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THAT wonderful sucker trick, the hidden-ball play, has been cropping up with new frequency this season and the latest player to take that long, sheepish walk back to the dugout was Monte Kennedy of the Giants, in Cincinnati the other day.

The embarrassed Mr. Kennedy was victimized by Connie Ryan, the Reds' second baseman in a very vital spot in the seventh inning of what wound up as a 1-0 victory for the Reds. The Giants had a man on third, Kennedy on second and only one out, and were happily contemplating the tying run when it happened.

POVICH

Ryan mosied over to Kennedy, who was taking a conventional lead off second, and started to make small-talk conversation. Kennedy looked at him inquiringly, whereupon Ryan said, "And look what I have here in my hand." Kennedy looked, saw a baseball, froze in his tracks, and was promptly tagged out.

It was of a piece with the hidden ball trick pulled on Eddie Yost a couple of weeks ago by Billy Hitchcock, of the A's. Most of the time it happens around second base, although it can occur also at third, and sometimes at first base.

IN THE CASE of both Kennedy and Yost, the stage was set by the preceding play—an out at first base with the second baseman covering the bag, with the pitcher also in the vicinity of first base. Quite lost upon the players and the coaches in the excitement was the fact that the second baseman never bothered to return the ball to the pitcher.

The pitcher has to play his part and stooge for the second baseman by returning to the mound, empty-handed, as if to resume pitching. But he must be careful not to step on the rubber without the ball. In recent years, they've even forbidden him to straddle the rubber, or use any form of deceit. But he can approach the slab, take a hitch in his belt or do anything short of getting ready to pitch.

"That's the longest walk in baseball, after you've been suckered into a hidden ball trick," Bucky Harris was saying yesterday. Asked if he had ever been tricked into it, Bucky said, "Not to my knowledge, and if it had happened to me you can bet I would remember it, so I guess the answer is "no." But everybody is sorry for those poor devils who do get caught."

THE MASTER of the play probably was Frankie Crosetti, of the Yankees, who was the most polite of all the tagger-outs. He concealed the ball in his glove one day, got between Augie Galan and the bag, and said, "Augie, I want you to meet an old friend of mine. This is A. J. Reach, you remember him?" Whereupon he dug a shiny, new official ball into Galan's ribs and added, "Sorry, it had to be you, Augie, old boy."

Al Rosen of the Cleveland Indians almost pulled it on Eddie Stewart of the Nats at third base in Cleveland last month. "The only reason he didn't get away with it," said Harris, "was because I had a hunch and called time just before Stewart stepped off the bag. Rosen used to try to pull it when he was playing for me at San Diego last year, and it just happened I got curious about where the ball was at the right time."

The Athletics are the slickest perpetrators of the trick in the American League. Second Baseman Pete Suder pulled it on Gene Woodling of the Yankees last month, and Hitchcock almost repeated the trick against the Nats in Philadelphia a couple of weeks ago. Sherry Robertson was on second base and just about to be victimized when a warning yell came from Al Sima on the Nats bench. Only Sima had noted the A's pitcher didn't have the ball.

THE DADDY of all hidden-ball play stories was Rabbit Maranville's, of course. That one happened back in the '20s, when Maranville was managing the Cubs, and was caught napping off second base by the Cardinals. The Rabbit was still fuming for hours after the game.

"Twenty-five years in the majors and I get caught by the hidden ball trick," he moaned that evening to his friend, the manager of the Jefferson Hotel. The latter tried to console him. "It could happen to anybody. Anyway, don't let it ruin your appetite. We're having dinner in my suite."

The dinner they had featured a 3-inch steak to Maranville's liking. Also to Maranville's liking was the heaping mound of chocolate ice cream as the desert. By that time, the Rabbit was calm and philosophical about the whole incident of the hidden ball. He attacked the ice cream eagerly, and then his spoon struck a hard object within. You guessed it—a hidden baseball.

BIG FELLOWS DON'T WORRY HIM—Eddie LeBaron, 5-foot 8-inch rookie quarterback of the Washington Redskins, kets off a pass in a Los Angeles practice session as two of the biggest men on the squad, Tackles Bob Hendren, left, 6'8", and George Bayer, 6'6", charge toward him. Impressed with the progress of LeBaron and the rest of the team, Coach Herman Ball ordered a full-scale scrimmage for his 51-man squad Saturday

Scarborough Beaten 2d Night in Row By Old Pals

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Sam Dente hit a ground ball to deep short, fled to first base, beat Chico Carrasquel's throw by a thin eyelash and broke up a 10-inning ball game in favor of the Nats last night. They beat the White Sox, 5-4.

They wound up pouring it on their former pal, Ray Scarborough, who moved into the contest as the fifth White Sox pitcher in the ninth inning and collected his second defeat in consecutive nights.

Irv Noren dealt Scarborough his initial jolt by leading off the tenth with a two-bagger to right center, but the former Nat was apparently pitching himself out of trouble when Dente caved him in. He gave Mickey Vernon an intentional walk, held Eddie Stewart to a pop foul and personally threw out Cass Michaels.

Dente Beats Throw

It was on Michael's tap that Noren reached third. On Dente's smash, Carrasquel went far to his right for a smart pick-up and from far out of position got off a superb throw to first base. The next voices heard were the cheers of the 4277 fans who saw Umpire Ed Hurley call Dente safe, as Noren scored.

Mickey Harris was the winning pitcher. He found his way into the contest in the eighth, pitched him self out of trouble in the eighth and ninth and got credit for the victory.

Ed Stewart saved Harris' hide in the ninth by a leaping one hand catch of Ed Robinson's smash to the right field wall for the third out with two on base.

Rookie Jim Pearce was in his maiden effort as a starting pitcher for the Nats, and did a tolerable job of it in the six innings he lasted, but was trailing, 3-1, when he left.

The Nats caught up with Randy Gumpert, finally, with a two-run sixth inning and in the seventh they tied it up at 4-4, when Gil Coan belted a two-run single with the bases full against Howie Judson.

Chisox Have 3-0 Lead

When Carrasquel opened the fifth with a single to left, he was sacrificed to second and scored on Rickert's single off Dente's glove. Gumpert took a 3-lead into the sixth.

Gumpert didn't last out the sixth. Pinchhitter Sam Mele opened with a single to left, after Yost popped out. Coan, Noren and Vernon drilled consecutive singles to right that scored two runs. Noren barely got out of the path of Vernon's hit and was forced to hold up at second.

Howie Judson moved in, and halted the damage by holding Stewart to a long fly to Zernial, and getting rid of Michaels on a ground ball to preserve a 3-2 lead.

Against Elmer Singleton in the seventh, the Sox got a run back without a hit. Carrasquel drew a walk, and on Baker's sacrifice scrambled all the way to third after noting that the Nats had left that bag uncovered. He scored when Rickert bounced a ball to Vernon who in his haste to make a throw home neglected to pick it up. It went through his legs for an error.

Judson's walk to Grasso with one out launched the Nats' game-tying rally in the seventh. Pinch Hitter

Truman Goes to Bat In 2 Kinds of Crises

Washington was two runs behind and had two men on base—then Truman came to bat.

Television baseball fans groaned when that happened last night. To them, it was the wrong time for an address on the war. When television got back to baseball the score was tied at 4-4. Then the Nats went on to win.

Dillinger Sold To Pirates by A's

Philadelphia, July 19 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics tonight announced the outright sale of Third Baseman Bob Dillinger to the Pittsburgh Pirates. Dillinger, purchased from the St. Louis Browns for $100,000 at the winter major league meeting, will report to the Pirates immediately.

Vice President Roy Mack announced the sale after the Athletics dropped a 4-0 decision to the Cleveland Indians tonight.

It is believed the Pirates handed over $100,000 for the third sacker.

The Athletics attempted to make the deal with Pittsburgh when they placed him on the waiver list before the June 15 trading deadline but three American League clubs refused to waive on the 31-year old bespectacled infielder.

Dillinger

Dillinger came to the Athletics along with Outfielder Paul Lehner, in the deal that sent cash and four players to the Browns. The Athletics gave up Infielders Frank Gustine and Billy DeMars and Outfielders Rocco Ippolito and Ray Coleman.

Dillinger, one of the eight active players in the American League with a life time batting mark over .30, leaves the American League club with a .310 batting mark.

When informed of the deal, Dillinger said:

"I am not in the least bit surprised and to tell the truth am quite happy over the transaction.

The Athletics announced Kermit Wahl will be moved to third with Pete Suder taking over short unil Eddie Joost is able to return to the lineup.

Roy Mack said all of the American League clubs waived on Dillinger. "He was a big disappointment," said Roy. "He just didn't fit into the combination."

Asked if the Athletics sold Dillinger in an effort to recoup some of their financial losses, Roy said: "If we did, we only got back a small portion of the price we paid for Dillinger."

Cardinals Win 2, Take Lead; Phils, Bucs Split

Pittsburgh, July 19 (AP)—The Philadelphia Phillies and Pittsburgh Pirates divided a twin bill today, the Whiz Kids taking the eleventh inning opener 32 on Granny Hamner's two-run homer and the Bucs the nightcap 4-2.

Rookie Bill MacDonald throttled the Phils with five hits in the nightcap, besting Russ Meyer and Jim Konstanty.

Mize, Lopat Highlight Yanks' Sweep

New York, July 19 (AP).—Johnny Mize continued his great batting surge this afternoon as the New York Yankees swept the St. Louis Browns in a doubleheader, 16-1 and 4-3. The veteran first baseman smashed out five hits in six tries, his homer off Ned Garver deciding the nightcap in the eighth inning.

Mize, who was ticketed for the minors only two weeks ago, hit .900 in the three-game set with the Browns. He belted three home runs, a double and five singles. Johnny also drew three walks and had been to base safely 11 straight times before striking out on a fast ball by Garver in the sixth inning. The veteran first baseman raised his batting average from .258 to .347 in the series.

In the opener, Ed Lopat, chunky Yankee southpaw, fired a no-hitter for seven innings. He lost it in the eighth when his first pitch, a very slow screw ball, was knocked into the left field stands for a homer by Roy Sievers. Sherm Lollar pinch-singled in the ninth for the only other safety off Lopat, who gained his twelfth victory.

The loss of the second game was rough for Garver, whose record dropped below .500 (8-9). The little righthander battled the Yankees on the hill and at bat, his three straight hits helping St. Louis gain a 3-2 lead by the sixth, when Fred Sanford, Yankee starter, was knocked out. The Yanks tied it up in the seventh and won out on Mize's belt into the rightfield seats an inning later.

Meeker, Austeri Win Wrestle Royal

Ronald Meeker defeated Jim Austeri in 21 minutes with a drop kick in the feature wrestling match before 1700 persons last night at Turner's Arena.

Meeker and Austeri were the two survivors of a 10-man wrestle royal.

In the semiwindup, Tony Martinelli defeated Tiny Mills with a body slam in seven minutes. In other matches, Tony Cosenza and Ace Freeman wrestled to a 30-minute draw, Marvin Mercer won from Jesse James in 15½ minutes with a body press and Faro Rinaldo defeated Harry Finkelstein in 10 minutes with a body press.

Bob Pitches Like Feller of Old, Halts A's

Philadelphia, July 19 (AP).—Bob Feller posted his second shutout win over the Philadelphia Athletics with a four-hit pitching job as the Cleveland Indians chalked up a 4-0 triumph here tonight.

Joe Gordon's 10th home run of the season, with one man on base, aided Feller's cause.

In his previous shutout of the Athletics, Feller allowed Connie Mack's men only two hits. He was in trouble only once tonight. That was in the third when Kermit Wahl singled and Mike Guerra doubled.

Detroit Slugs 3 Rookies for Dozen Hits

Boston, July 19 (AP).—The top-place Detroit Tigers nipped two threatening rallies in the bud today while pulling out a 9-5 victory over the Boston Red Sox for Righthander Dizzy Trout.

Each team used three pitchers and each totaled 12 hits. Vic Wertz stroked his 15th homer of the season against Bosox Starter Willard Nixon and Bobby Doerr caused Trout's departure in the eighth with a two-run circuit drive.

Doerr's homer, his twelfth of the season, cut the Tigers' lead to 6-3 but Red Rolfe's hustlers added three more tallies in the ninth on four bases on balls and Johnny Lipon's second two-run hit of the game.

Calif. Drill Team Performs at Nats Game

The Half Moon Bay Spanish Town Dons, a crack drill team from Half Moon Bay, Calif., will put on a 15-minute show at the Chicago-Washington ball game tonight at Griffith Stadium.

The Dons are coming here to help Washington celebrate its Sesquicentennial. Second headquarters said the team of 26 men and two women does a cadence of 144 steps a minute and has won a hundred first places in drill-team competition over the country.

Mrs. Jack Smith Wins Prince Georges Low Net

Mrs. Jack Smith won low net honors in the weekly ladies day play yesterday at the Prince Georges Country Club with 83-13-70. Second went to Mrs. Jack Billings, 108-36-72, and third to Mrs. R. C. Rose, 88-16-72.

Mrs. Taylor of Manor won the guest prize with 97-17-80.

Colossal 3d In Tight Race For $29,350

Chicago, July 19 (AP).—Inseparable and Seaward, owned by A. E. Reuben of Toledo, Ohio, ran 1-2 in a three-horse photo finish of the $29,350 Stars and Stripes Handicap at Arlington Park today.

The third horse in the picture was Fred W. Hooper's Colosal, who led the 18-horse field around the final turn and then tired slightly in the drive. The winners' official margin was a head, with Colosal a short neck behind Seward.

Carl Graham's Fancy Flyer finished a bang-up fourth in the mile and a furlong event contested over a somewhat damp grass course. He was only half a length behind Colosal.

With Walmac Farm's Volcanic a late scratch, the Inseparable-Seward pair went off as the 7-2 favorite of the 12,445 customers. Colosal was the second choice at 5-1.

The Reuben duo paid $9.40 to win, $8.40 to place and $5.40 to show. Show price on Colosal was $5.60. The time was 1:52 1/5.

Inseparable earned $20,375 for first money, and Seaward $5000 for second, giving Owner Reuben total winnings of $25,375.

This was the first time the Stars and Stripes was contested over the grass. In previous years it was run over the main course as the Fourth of July feature.

But few, if any, previous Stars and Stripes provided as much excitement as today's affair. G. H. (Pete) Bostwick's Stunts, V. L. Shea's Take Ten and Hal Price Headley's Lithe showed the way in that orded around the clubhouse turn. Colosal wasn't far behind, and Inseparable and Seaward in the middle of the pack.

Stunts gave up going into the far turn, and Take Ten took over. He soon had enough, and Colosal ran to the front on the inside. Around the stretch turn it was Colosal on top by a short margin. The rest of the field was bunched up behind him, and it looked like a Jeb Stuart Cavalry charge.

Seaward, ridden by Steve Brooks, and Inseparable, piloted by Ken Church, both started to come on the outside. It wasn't until well down into the stretch that Seaward hooked Colosal. Inseparable was almost lapped on the pair, and he then outgamed his stablemate to the wire.

Leoffler Didn't Take Cadillac to Europe

The Washington Post was in error yesterday when it reported that S. G. Leoffler, czar of the local public golf links, took the S. G. Leoffler Co.-owned Cadillac on his current trip to Europe.

Mrs. Oscar J. Bernstein, Leoffler's office manager, said that "Mr. Leoffler took his other car, a DeSoto. His Cadillac is right here in town."

Mrs. Bernstein added that Leoffler's trip is a combination vacation-business journey. She said, "Mr. Loeffler intends to stop off at the St. Andrews course in Scotland. He's always looking for new ideas, you know, and there's some soil conservation work being done there that he wishes to investigate."

Horse Show At Marlboro This Saturday

By Harry de Mawby, jr.

The Combined Southern Maryland Horse Show to be held at the Marlboro Fair Grounds, Upper Marlboro, Md., Saturday and Sunday will attract the attention of the greater number of Virginia, District and Maryland exhibitors this weekend.

The show is the first major step in recent years towards bringing a large and higher quality horse show back to Maryland and is sponsored by the combined efforts of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Fair Association, the Southern Maryland Horse Breeder's Association, the Indian Head Lions Club, Hyattsville Lions Club, Maryboro Hunt Club, Prince Georges Democratic Club, St. Margaret's Horse Show, St. Mary's Horse Show, and the Seabrook-Oak Knoll Horse and Pony Show.

The first session on Saturday is the junior day program with the three pony divisions, junior hunter, junior jumper and students division scheduled in addition a lead line class and the D. Sterrett Gittings horsemanship event will be run.

The Sunday session, also starting at 10 a. m., will be devoted to breeding classes for broodmares, foals and yearlings both thoroughbred and half-bred. Two classes rare to eastern shows will be held for the Arabian breed of horses which should prove of great interest to the majority of showgoers in this area who are unfamiliar with this type of animal.

5 D. C. Juniors Climb In Amateur at Denver

Special to The Washington Post

Denver, July 19.—Led by Devitt Prep's Billy Wolfe, five schoolboy golfers from the Washington area won their first round matches in the National Junior Golf Tournament at the Denver Country Club here today.

Wolfe, winner of The Washington Post's Schoolboy championship, walloped Bobby Miller of Minneapolis, 6 and 5, the most decisive victory of the day.

Also passing their first round tests were Denny Bolster, of Gonzaga; Perky Cullinane, of St. John's; Billy Ball, of Western High School; and Ellsworth Franklin, jr., of Dahlgren, Va., who led Washington qualifiers.

Bolster sidelined Gene Follis, of Glasgow, Ky., 2 and 1; Cullinane eliminated Don Slutes, of Tucson, Ariz., 3 and 1; Ball disposed of John R. Geersten, San Francisco, 4 and 3; and Franklin downed Robert J. Donovan, jr., Shreveport, La., 2 up.

First round casualties included Oliver "Kay" Fletcher, of Roosevelt High, who was a 2-1 victim of Melvin Woelfling, of Ashland, Ohio, who led the qualifiers in the Cleveland area; and Billy Wilbourne, of Arlington, Va., ousted by Michael Levin, of Minneapolis, 1 up.

Bolster and Follis shot 37's, two over par, for the front nine on the Denver Country Club Course, to make the turn all even. Bolster quickly went into a two-up lead by winning the 10th and 11th holes and clung to his advantage, closing out Follis on the 17th with a par four.

Fletcher shot an outgoing 38 to hold a two-up lead over Woelfling at the halfway mark. The Cleveland youngster rallied, won the 11th and 13th to square the match, went one up on the 15th with a par five, birdied the short 16th and halved the final two holes for his victory.

John Brown, jr., of Lexington, Ky., was the standout performer today.

Brown, 16-year-old high school student, is a golfing buddy of last year's national champ, Gay Brewer, of Lexington. He didn't make a bad shot as he toured the layout in 68, three under men's par, to defeat Rex Baxter, of Amarillo, Tex., 4 and 3.

Brown took a two-hole lead over Baxter on the first nine, which he negotiated in 33 strokes. He was four up at the 13th and halved the next two holes with his Texas opponent to end the match on the 15th.

They finished the round and the Lexington lad shot his fourth birdie of the day on the 17th.

Probers at Kansas City Hear Two Ousted Police Officials

Kansas City, July 19 (AP).—The Kefauver Senate committee today dug into operations of the Kansas City Police Board at the time Charles Binaggio, north side political leader, and his henchman, Charles Gargotta, were slain last April.

The first two witnesses called before the committee as it opened its two-day closed-door hearing here were R. Robert Cohn and Hampton S. Chambers, both of whom were removed as Police Commissioners by Governor Forrest Smith in the upheaval that followed the gangland slayings, which never have been solved.

Since the hearing was closed, the specific testimony given by Cohn and Chambers could not be learned. It was recalled, however, that Cohn said after his removal that he once had informed Governor Smith of a bribe offer made him by Binaggio to "open up a few joints." Chambers also told of being subjected to severe pressure by Binaggio, who supported Smith for Governor.

When the hearing recessed for lunch, Senator Estes Kefauver, (D., Tenn.), committee chairman, said the nature of information given by the two former Police Commissioners had been such that "I cannot tell you what the testimony revealed at this time."

Kefauver said it was a fair assumption that the general subject matter of the morning inquiry was the operation of the Police Department under the board composed of Cohn, Chambers, J. L. Milligan and Sheridan Farrell, a hotel man. Milligan and Farrell resigned under fire after Binaggio's slaying.

Numerous other political and underworld figures were summoned to appear before the committee.

These included John H. Hendren, chairman of the State Democratic Committee; Raymond A. Edlund, Democratic State treasurer; and B. E. Ragland, assistant treasurer, and J. A. Purdome, Jackson County sheriff.

Others subpenaed included Edward Osadchey, also known as Eddie Spitz, race wire business partner of Binaggio; Walter L. Rainey, a gambler under indictment on Federal income-tax-evasion charges, and Tony Gizzo, who had been a partner of Binaggio.

Missouri Publisher Tells Of Smith Campaign Gift

Festus, Mo., July 19 (AP).—The publisher of the Festus News-Democrat today said he made arrangements for a $2000 contribution by a racing news distributor to the 1948 campaign of Gov. Forrest Smith of Missouri.

Charles E. Porter, the publisher, disclosed that he told of the arrangements in an appearance before the Kefauver Senate Crime Investigating Committee in St. Louis yesterday.

The racing news official is William Molasky, vice president of Pioneer News Service of St. Louis. Molasky wanted to recommend someone for appointment to the St. Louis Board of Police Commissioners by Governor Smith, Porter said.

Group Demands Action by Warren

Miami, Fla., July 19 (AP).—The Miami Crime Commission demanded today that Gov. Fuller Warren order prosecution of his friend William H. Johnston, for contributing $154,000 to the Governor's own election.

The demand was based upon testimony before the Kefauver Senate crime subcommittee that Johnston, part owner of dog racing tracks, was one of three major contributors to Warren's successful candidacy for Governor in 1948.

A Florida law forbids campaign contributions by race tracks, officials, or stockholders of tracks.

In a registered letter Col. Jack R. Younger, crime commission president, wrote:

"This communication is to be considered a demand that you, as chief executive of the State of Florida, comply with your oath of office and your proper obligation to the citizens of this State by ordering the appropriate authority to vigorously and expeditiously prosecute the violation committed by the said William H. Johnston."

Zoning Board Hears 33 Bids For Variances

The District Board of Zoning Adjustment last night took under advisement 33 requests for zoning variances after an all-day hearing. It announced it will meet Monday afternoon to make its decisions.

One request was from the Boys Club of Washington which asked that a gasoline station be permitted on the site of its clubhouse at 2726 M st. nw. Spokesmen said this branch of the club will be moved to new quarters next spring and that a gasoline company is a prospective buyer of the property at M st. and Pennsylvania ave.

The organization Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State sought for the third time in 16 months to obtain permission to establish an office at 1633 Massachusetts ave. nw. The board had denied previous appeals on the grounds that the group sought to influence legislation—a violation of the zoning section under which it appealed. Yesterday organization spokesmen testified it now has no lobbyists.

At Hillside

Tuesday Set For Decision On Theater

Prince Georges County Commissioners would like to hear from residents before deciding on the request of Stanley B. Frosh for permission to build a drive-in theater at Hillside.

Action on the rezoning issue was postponed until next Tuesday to allow local sentiment to make itself heard.

Fred W. Tuemmler, planning director of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, protested that a drive-in theater would create a traffic hazard at the Marlboro Pike location.

Frosh's attorney, Charles B. McKay, said that area residents want the project.

In another action, the commissioners denied a request for commercial zoning of nursery property on Ager rd., Hyattsville. John H. Burton, said his client sought the change in order to erect advertising signs.

Committee in France Approves 'Coke' Ban

Paris, July 19 (U.P.).—A French Parliamentary "Committee on Drinks" today approved a motion to ban the sale of Coca-Cola and similar beverages in France and the colonies.

A similar motion will be presented soon to the Chamber of Deputies, which several months ago roundly defeated the proposition.

Ruling in Falls Church Suit Over Annexation Due Today

A decision in hte Falls Church-Fairfax County annexation suit will be handed down at 3 p. m. today by a three-judge panel in Fairfax Circuit Court.

The City of Falls Church is trying to annex 10.75 square miles of Fairfax land. If the city should win its suit, its attorney's claim Falls Church population will swell to 28,000.

Each side gave concluding statements yesterday to wind up hearings which began June 19.

In his summation, Horace Edwards, principal attorney for Falls Church, described the disputed land as "wholly urban" and asked:

"How can anyone deny that this area should be under urban government? They only urban government is Falls Church."

But three attorneys representing Fairfax County attacked "this strangulation of adding five times to Falls Church," when its City Council already is "plunging the city into debt."

One of them, Attorney John F. Bethune, dipped into Shakespeare's Macbeth to warn the council of the "vaulting ambition which overleaps itself and falls."

Another Fairfax attorney, Robert J. McCandlish, jr., predicted that if Falls Church gets the new land, it will exceed its statutory debt limit trying to care for it.

Frank Ball, the third county attorney, challenged the Falls Church claim that the city is essential to the lives of annexation strip residents.

Falls Church has "no commercial center," he said, and only a few stores. All but one of its schools is operated by Fairfax County, and there is no community life in which nearby residents share.

If Falls Church were razed and "a fence built around it," Ball said, residents of the annexation land would never know the difference.

Attorney Edwards carried the ball yesterday for Falls Church. He said an "artificial line separates homogenous and contiguous peoples" in Falls Church and in its annexable environs.

If Falls Church wins its case, Edwards said, it will have to borrow to provide essential services in the new territory, because annexation law requires all taxes from that land be returned to it in the form of capital improvements for the first two years.

But, he added, at the end of a year "the City of Falls Church will still having a bonding capacity of $1,232,754" left, despite heavy borrowing needs.

He defended Falls Church services—water, sewage, trash pickup, streets, and storm sewers, all under steady attack by Fairfax attorneys. He acknowledged that the city is "restricted in size and has a limited tax base."

Attorneys for both sides yesterday conceded that consolidation of Arlington, Alexandria, Falls Church and Fairfax into one political unit some day would be desirable.

Optimist Luncheon Today

Northeast Optimist Club will tender a testimonal luncheon to Municipal Court Judge Armond W. Scott today at 12:15 p. m. at the Congressional Hotel, 300 New Jersey ave. se. The affair will mark 16 years on the bench by the judge.

All-American Baseball Here

The All-American Amateur Baseball Association's annual tournament, with 16 unlimited teams competing, will be held here again September 12 to 17. The 1949 tournament was also held in Washington.

The Heurich Brewers of this city, winners last year, will be the host team this year. The tournament opens with a night game on September 12 at Griffith Stadium. Play moves to the Ellipse on September 13 and 14, and returns to the ball park for the final three days.

Announcement of the dates and playing sites was made last night at the Heurich Brewery, where all 33 local teams were represented. Glenn L. Martin, president of the A. A. A. B. A., and Calvin Griffith of the Nats were also present.

Griffs Beat Chisox in 10th

Sherry Robertson singled to center and Yost drew a walk to fill the bases. Coan hit the first pitch for a two-run single to center that tied it up.

Yost scampered to third on Coan's blow with one out, but the Nats got nothing more out of the inning. Noren flied to Philley in short center, and Catcher Gus Niarhos survived a bruising collision at the plate to tag Yost out when he tried to score after the catch.

Mickey Harris moved in as the Nats' pitcher in the eighth and was immediately in trouble when Fox got a double to center with one out on a sinking liner that Noren could barely get his glove on. He pitched himself out of that mess, and another one in the ninth after Carrasquel led off with a single.

Eventually came the Nats' tenth when Sam Dente's little hit proved the game's biggest.

IN SHORT . . . A delegation of Venezuelan officials and amateur ball players were flown in by Pan-Am and had special seats near the White Sox dugout and feasted their eyes on their countryman, Shortstop Chico Carrasquel. . . . Venezuela is enlisting the aid of the State Department to persuade Clark Griffith to let his Nats play a week of exhibition games with the White Sox in Caracas next March. They view it as a way to combat communism in South America . . . Umpire-in-Chief Bill McGowan overruled Umpire Jim Honochick, who called Carrasquel's drive over third base in the third inning a fair ball McGowan said it was foul, and he prevailed. . . . Chico Marrero will pitch against the White Sox tonight. It will be Ken Holcombe or Bob Cain for Chicago.

Walters Back On Active List

Boston, July 19 (AP).—William "Bucky" Walters, 40, who has won 198 major league games but hasn't seen action in two years, today was released as a Braves coach and placed on the active list as a pitcher.

A Braves spokesman said the change was made in the belief that Walters is still capable of doing a turn on the mound despite his age.

Walters' best year was in 1944 when he won 23 and lost eight for the Cincinnati Reds. His last year of active service was in 1948 when the Reds made him coach and eventually manager for part of the season.

The Braves took him on at the start of the current season. They said at the time they might use him in a pitching role when the need was felt—not only to help him gain his 200th victory but also to bolster the pitching staff.

A club spokesman said Walters will be used in a relief role in the near future and eventually even as a starter.

To make room for him on the pitching staff, the contract of rookie pitcher Murray Wall was assigned outright to the Milwaukee club.

Now We Know Pep Will Show For Fight Here

The girl who prevented his original apearance here, July 10, will accompany Featherweight Champion Willie Pep to Washington for his non-title bout with Bobby Bell at Griffith Stadium next Monday night.

At that time she was Miss Dolores von Frenckell, who married Pep on the day he was supposed to fight here.

"Willie and I will be in Washington Thursday night," the new Mrs. Pep wired Promoter Goldie Ahearm yesterday. Pep will conclude his training at the Liberty Gymnaisum Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Glick Wins In R. I. Tourney

Providence, R. I., July 19 (AP).—Co-favorites Mae Murray of Rutland, Vt., and Pat O'Sullivan of Orange, Conn., both scored second-round 4 and 2 victories in reaching the semi-finals of the Point Judith C. C.'s women's invitation golf tournament today.

Miss Murray defeated Mrs. Walter J. Reeves of Bear Hill, Mass., while Miss O'Sullivan ousted Elizabeth Greene of Nayatt, R. I.

Mrs. Maurice Glick of Baltimore defeated Cynthia Richardson of Attleboro, 6 and 5, to gain the semifinals also.

Crosby Retains Holdings

Banker McKinney Sells Stock In Pittsburgh to 2 Partners

Pittsburgh, July 19 (AP).—Frank E. McKinney, Indianapolis banker turned diamond magnate, sold his share of one of baseball's richest gold mines today to two partners.

McKinney resigned as president of the Pittsburgh Pirates. His interests were purchased by John Galbreath, a Columbus, Ohio., real estate mogul, and Tom Johnson, Pittsburgh broker.

Galbreath, now principal stockholder of the last-place Bucs, is the new president of the club. Johnson, secretary of the combine which bought the Pirates four years ago, also assumed Galbreath's old duties as treasurer.

The status of the fourth Pittsburgh owner Crooner Bing Crosby—remains unchanged for the present. Crosby, the Bucs vice president, has been offered a portion of McKinney's holdings if he wants it.

In an addition to an undisclosed amount of cash, the 46-year-old McKinney regained outright ownership of the Indianapolis club in the American Association. He tossed the Indians into the Pirate pot in August, 1946, when the group bought the Bucs from the Barney Dreyfuss interests.

Both Galbreath and McKinney indicated Indianapolis will—in effect—continue to be part of the 13-club Pirate farm system.

"McKinney has assured us we have first call on any new players," Galbreath stated. "And, of course, the players we optioned to the Indians will come back here when and if we want them."

McKinney explained the sale with this statement:

"My business interests and my home are in Indianapolis, and with the present demands being made on my time I find it increasingly difficult to devote the necessary time to my baseball interests in Pittsburgh."

With McKinney dishing out the money and General Manager Roy Hamey calling signals, the Pirates ownership spent an estimated five million dollars in a five-year pennant plan since their two-million-dollar original investment in 1946.

5 D. C. Juniors Climb In Amateur at Denver

Special to The Washington Post

Denver, July 19.—Led by Devitt Prep's Billy Wolfe, five schoolboy golfers from the Washington area won their first round matches in the National Junior Golf Tournament at the Denver Country Club here today.

Wolfe, winner of The Washington Post's Schoolboy championship, walloped Bobby Miller of Minneapolis, 6 and 5, the most decisive victory of the day.

Also passing their first round tests were Denny Bolster, of Gonzaga; Perky Cullinane, of St. John's; Billy Ball, of Western High School; and Ellsworth Franklin, jr., of Dahlgren, Va., who led Washington qualifiers.

Bolster sidelined Gene Follis, of Glasgow, Ky., 2 and 1; Cullinane eliminated Don Slutes, of Tucson, Ariz., 3 and 1; Ball disposed of John R. Geersten, San Francisco, 4 and 3; and Franklin downed Robert J. Donovan, jr., Shreveport, La., 2 up.

First round casualties included Oliver "Kay" Fletcher, of Roosevelt High, who was a 2-1 victim of Melvin Woelfling, of Ashland, Ohio, who led the qualifiers in the Cleveland area; and Billy Wilbourne, of Arlington, Va., ousted by Michael Levin, of Minneapolis, 1 up.

Bolster and Follis shot 37's, two over par, for the front nine on the Denver Country Club Course, to make the turn all even. Bolster quickly went into a two-up lead by winning the 10th and 11th holes and clung to his advantage, closing out Follis on the 17th with a par four.

Fletcher shot an outgoing 38 to hold a two-up lead over Woelfling at the halfway mark. The Cleveland youngster rallied, won the the 11th and 13th to square the match, went one up on the 15th with a par five, birdied the short 16th and halved the final two holes for his victory.

John Brown, jr., of Lexington, Ky., was the standout performer today.

Brown, 16-year-old high school student, is a golfing buddy of last year's national champ, Gay Brewer, of Lexington. He didn't make a bad shot as he toured the layout in 68, three under men's par, to defeat Rex Baxter, of Amarillo, Tex., 4 and 3.

Brown took a two-hole lead over Baxter on the first nine, which he negotiated in 33 strokes. He was four up at the 13th and halved the next two holes with his Texas opponent to end the match on the 15th.

They finished the round and the Lexington lad shot his fourth birdie of the day on the 17th.

Probers at Kansas City Hear Two Ousted Police Officials

Kansas City, July 19 (AP).—The Kefauver Senate committee today dug into operations of the Kansas City Police Board at the time Charles Binaggio, north side political leader, and his henchman, Charles Gargotta, were slain last April.

The first two witnesses called before the committee as it opened its two-day closed-door hearing here were R. Robert Cohn and Hampton S. Chambers, both of whom were removed as Police Commissioners by Governor Forrest Smith in the upheaval that followed the gangland slayings, which never have been solved.

Since the hearing was closed, the specific testimony given by Cohn and Chambers could not be learned. It was recalled, however, that Cohn said after his removal that he once had informed Governor Smith of a bribe offer made him by Binaggio to "open up a few joints." Chambers also told of being subjected to severe pressure by Binaggio, who supported Smith for Governor.

When the hearing recessed for lunch, Senator Estes Kefauver, (D., Tenn.), committee chairman, said the nature of information given by the two former Police Commissioners had been such that "I cannot tell you what the testimony revealed at this time."

Kefauver said it was a fair assumption that the general subject matter of the morning inquiry was the operation of the Police Department under the board composed of Cohn, Chambers, J. L. Milligan and Sheridan Farrell, a hotel man. Milligan and Farrell resigned under fire after Binaggio's slaying.

Numerous other political and underworld figures were summoned to appear before the committee.

These included John H. Hendren, chairman of the State Democratic Committee; Raymond A. Edlund, Democratic State treasurer; and B. E. Ragland, assistant treasurer, and J. A. Purdome, Jackson County sheriff.

Others subpenaed included Edward Osadchey, also known as Eddie Spitz, race wire business partner of Binaggio; Walter L. Rainey, a gambler under indictment on Federal income-tax-evasion charges, and Tony Gizzo, who had been a partner of Binaggio.

Missouri Publisher Tells Of Smith Campaign Gift

Festus, Mo., July 19 (AP).—The publisher of the Festus News-Democrat today said he made arrangements for a $2000 contribution by a racing news distributor to the 1948 campaign of Gov. Forrest Smith of Missouri.

Charles E. Porter, the publisher, disclosed that he told of the arrangements in an appearance before the Kefauver Senate Crime Investigating Committee in St. Louis yesterday.

The racing news official is William Molasky, vice president of Pioneer News Service of St. Louis. Molasky wanted to recommend someone for appointment to the St. Louis Board of Police Commissioners by Governor Smith, Porter said.

Group Demands Action by Warren

Miami, Fla., July 19 (AP).—The Miami Crime Commission demanded today that Gov. Fuller Warren order prosecution of his friend William H. Johnston, for contributing $154,000 to the Governor's own election.

The demand was based upon testimony before the Kefauver Senate crime subcommittee that Johnston, part owner of dog racing tracks, was one of three major contributors to Warren's successful candidacy for Governor in 1948.

A Florida law forbids campaign contributions by race tracks, officials or stockholders of tracks.

In a registered letter Col. Jack R. Younger, crime commission president, wrote:

"This communication is to be considered a demand that you, as chief executive of the State of Florida, comply with your oath of office and your proper obligation to the citizens of this State by ordering the appropriate authority to vigorously and expeditiously prosecute the violation committed by the said William H. Johnston."

Zoning Board Hears 33 Bids For Variances

The District Board of Zoning Adjustment last night took under advisement 33 requests for zoning variances after an all-day hearing. It announced it will meet Monday afternoon to make its decisions.

One request was from the Boys Club of Washington which asked that a gasoline station be permitted on the site of its clubhouse at 2726 M st. nw. Spokesmen said this branch of the club will be moved to new quarters next spring and that a gasoline company is a prospective buyer of the property at M st. and Pennsylvania ave.

The organization Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State sought for the third time in 16 months to obtain permission to establish an office at 1633 Massachusetts ave. nw. The board had denied previous appeals on the grounds that the group sought to influence legislation—a violation of the zoning section under which it appealed. Yesterday organization spokesmen testified it now has no lobbyists.

At Hillside

Tuesday Set For Decision On Theater

Prince Georges County Commissioners would like to hear from residents before deciding on the request of Stanley B. Frosh for permission to build a drive-in theater at Hillside.

Action on the rezoning issue was postponed until next Tuesday to allow local sentiment to make itself heard.

Fred W. Tuemmler, planning director of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, protested that a drive-in theater would create a traffic hazard at the Marlboro Pike location.

Frosh's attorney, Charles B. McKay, said that area residents want the project.

In another action, the commissioners denied a request for commercial zoning of nursery property on Ager rd., Hyattsville. John H. Burton, said his client sought the change in order to erect advertising signs.

Committee in France Approves 'Coke' Ban

Paris, July 19 (U.P.).—A French Parliamentary "Committee on Drinks" today approved a motion to ban the sale of Coca-Cola and similar beverages in France and the colonies.

A similar motion will be presented soon to the Chamber of Deputies, which several months ago roundly defeated the proposition.

Ruling in Falls Church Suit Over Annexation Due Today

A decision in hte Falls Church-Fairfax County annexation suit will be handed down at 3 p. m. today by a three-judge panel in Fairfax Circuit Court.

The City of Falls Church is trying to annex 10.75 square miles of Fairfax land. If the city should win its suit, its attorney's claim Falls Church population will swell to 28,000.

Each side gave concluding statements yesterday to wind up hearings which began June 19.

In his summation, Horace Edwards, principal attorney for Falls Church, described the disputed land as "wholly urban" and asked:

"How can anyone deny that this area should be under urban government? They only urban government is Falls Church."

But three attorneys representing Fairfax County attacked "this strangulation of adding five times to Falls Church," when its City Council already is "plunging the city into debt."

One of them, Attorney John F. Bethune, dipped into Shakespeare's Macbeth to warn the council of the "vaulting ambition which overleaps itself and falls."

Another Fairfax attorney, Robert J. McCandlish, jr., predicted that if Falls Church gets the new land, it will exceed its statutory debt limit trying to care for it.

Frank Ball, the third county attorney, challenged the Falls Church claim that the city is essential to the lives of annexation strip residents.

Falls Church has "no commercial center," he said, and only a few stores. All but one of its schools is operated by Fairfax County, and there is no community life in which nearby residents share.

If Falls Church were razed and "a fence built afound it," Ball said, residents of the annexation land would never know the difference.

Attorney Edwards carried the ball yesterday for Falls Church. He said an "artificial line separates homogenous and 'contiguous peoples" in Falls Church and in its annexable environs.

If Falls Church wins its case, Edwards said, it will have to borrow to provide essential services in the new territory, because annexation law requires all taxes from that land be returned to it in the form of capital improvements for the first two years.

But, he added, at the end of a year "the City of Falls Church will still having a bonding capacity of $1,232,754" left, despite heavy borrowing needs.

He defended Falls Church services—water, sewage, trash pickup, streets, and storm sewers, all under steady attack by Fairfax attorneys. He acknowledged that the city is "restricted in size and has a limited tax base."

Attorneys for both sides yesterday conceded that consolidation of Arlington, Alexandria, Falls Church and Fairfax into one political unit some day would be desirable.

Optimist Luncheon Today

Northeast Optimist Club will tender a testimonal luncheon to Municipal Court Judge Armond W. Scott today at 12:15 p. m. at the Congressional Hotel, 300 New Jersey ave. se. The affair will mark 16 years on the bench by the judge.

All-American Baseball Here

The All-American Amateur Baseball Association's annual tournament, with 16 unlimited teams competing, will be held here again September 12 to 17. The 1949 tournament was also held in Washington.

The Heurich Brewers of this city, winners last year, will be the host team this year. The tournament opens with a night game on September 12 at Griffith Stadium. Play moves to the Ellipse on September 13 and 14, and returns to the ball park for the final three days.

Announcement of the dates and playing sites was made last night at the Heurich Brewery, where all 33 local teams were represented. Glenn L. Martin, president of the A. A. A. B. A., and Calvin Griffith of the Nats were also present.

Griffs Beat Chisox in 10th

Sherry Robertson singled to center and Yost drew a walk to fill the bases. Coan hit the first pitch for a two-run single to center that tied it up.

Yost scampered to third on Coan's blow with one out, but the Nats got nothing more out of the inning. Noren flied to Philley in short center, and Catcher Gus Niarhos survived a bruising collision at the plate to tag Yost out when he tried to score after the catch.

Mickey Harris moved in as the Nats' pitcher in the eighth and was immediately in trouble when Fox got a double to center with one out on a sinking liner that Noren could barely get his glove on. He pitched himself out of that mess, and another one in the ninth after Carrasquel led off with a single.

Eventually came the Nats' tenth when Sam Dente's little hit proved the game's biggest.

IN SHORT . . . A delegation of Venezuelan officials and amateur ball players were flown in by Pan-Am and had special seats near the White Sox dugout and feasted their eyes on their countryman, Shortstop Chico Carrasquel. . . . Venezuela is enlisting the aid of the State Department to persuade Clark Griffith to let his Nats play a week of exhibition games with the White Sox in Caracas next March. They view it as a way to combat communism in South America . . . Umpire-in-Chief Bill McGowan overruled Umpire Jim Honochick, who called Carrasquel's drive over third base in the third inning a fair ball McGowan said it was foul, and he prevailed. . . . Chico Marrero will pitch against the White Sox tonight. It will be Ken Holcombe or Bob Cain for Chicago.

Walters Back On Active List

Boston, July 19 (AP).—William "Bucky" Walters, 40, who has won 198 major league games but hasn't seen action in two years, today was released as a Braves coach and placed on the active list as a pitcher.

A Braves spokesman said the change was made in the belief that Walters is still capable of doing a turn on the mound despite his age.

Walters' best year was in 1944 when he won 23 and lost eight for the Cincinnati Reds. His last year of active service was in 1948 when the Reds made him coach and eventually manager for part of the season.

The Braves took him on at the start of the current season. They said at the time they might use him in a pitching role when the need was felt—not only to help him gain his 200th victory but also to bolster the pitching staff.

A club spokesman said Walters will be used in a relief role in the near future and eventually even as a starter.

To make room for him on the pitching staff, the contract of rookie pitcher Murray Wall was assigned outright to the Milwaukee club.

Now We Know Pep Will Show For Fight Here

The girl who prevented his original apearance here, July 10, will accompany Featherweight Champion Willie Pep to Washington for his non-title bout with Bobby Bell at Griffith Stadium next Monday night.

At that time she was Miss Dolores von Frenckell, who married Pep on the day he was supposed to fight here.

"Willie and I will be in Washington Thursday night," the new Mrs. Pep wired Promoter Goldie Ahearm yesterday. Pep will conclude his training at the Liberty Gymnaisum Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Glick Wins In R. I. Tourney

Providence, R. I., July 19 (AP).—Co-favorites Mae Murray of Rutland, Vt., and Pat O'Sullivan of Orange, Conn., both scored second-round 4 and 2 victories in reaching the semi-finals of the Point Judith C. C.'s women's invitation golf tournament today.

Miss Murray defeated Mrs. Walter J. Reeves of Bear Hill, Mass., while Miss O'Sullivan ousted Elizabeth Greene of Nayatt, R. I.

Mrs. Maurice Glick of Baltimore defeated Cynthia Richardson of Attleboro, 6 and 5, to gain the semifinals also.

Crosby Retains Holdings

Banker McKinney Sells Stock In Pittsburgh to 2 Partners

Pittsburgh, July 19 (AP).—Frank E. McKinney, Indianapolis banker turned diamond magnate, sold his share of one of baseball's richest gold mines today to two partners.

McKinney resigned as president of the Pittsburgh Pirates. His interests were purchased by John Galbreath, a Columbus, Ohio., real estate mogul, and Tom Johnson, Pittsburgh broker.

Galbreath, now principal stockholder of the last-place Bucs, is the new president of the club. Johnson, secretary of the combine which bought the Pirates four years ago, also assumed Galbreath's old duties as treasurer.

The status of the fourth Pittsburgh owner Crooner Bing Crosby—remains unchanged for the present. Crosby, the Bucs vice president, has been offered a portion of McKinney's holdings if he wants it.

In an addition to an undisclosed amount of cash, the 46-year-old McKinney regained outright ownership of the Indianapolis club in the American Association. He tossed the Indians into the Pirate pot in August, 1946, when the group bought the Bucs from the Barney Dreyfuss interests.

Both Galbreath and McKinney indicated Indianapolis will—in effect—continue to be part of the 13-club Pirate farm system.

"McKinney has assured us we have first call on any new players," Galbreath stated. "And, of course, the players we optioned to the Indians will come back here when and if we want them."

McKinney explained the sale with this statement:

"My business interests and my home are in Indianapolis, and with the present demands being made on my time I find it increasingly difficult to devote the necessary time to my baseball interests in Pittsburgh."

With McKinney dishing out the money and General Manager Roy Hamey calling signals, the Pirates ownership spent an estimated five million dollars in a five-year pennant plan since their two-million-dollar original investment in 1946.

All Except One Assert Cities Should Elect Their Own Officials

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

OUR TOWNS came to Washington, D. C., yesterday.

Mayors of six American towns named Washington were here as guests of the Sesquicentennial Commission. They head towns ranging in population from 507 to 5880.

This shows, perhaps, that size is not everything, for the people in these Washingtons elect their mayors.

With one exception, all of the mayors think it is a fine thing for all cities to elect their officials. The exception was the 72-year-old Mayor of Washington, Ga., who was not sure about home rule for Washington, D. C., in particular, and not sure about Washington, D. C., in general.

"We have no desire whatever to emulate Washington, D. C.," he said. "They have too much politics for our kind of living."

THE mayors, most of whom had never been here before, rubbernecked the city and had lunch with Senators on Capitol Hill. They brought here the breath of this land and evoked a reminder that the land is perhaps a thing of towns even more than of great cities. For example:

In Washington, Utah, there are 507 persons, which is less than in any one of these big buildings here, and it is a different life. The people don't work in offices, but raise early truck, beets, hay and lots of turkey—it is "turkey country."

The mayor runs the general store, although in the Battle of the Bulge he operated a Bofors, which is a 40-millimeter gun.

He is 31 years old and his name is Quentin S. Nisson. He was elected on the People's Party ticket running against the Progressive Party, which is something else in Washington, Utah, and not relative to the Wallace crowd.

NISSON, who is a square-built affable guy and is probably a good mayor as he was probably a very good man on the Bofors, was here for the first time and talked about the other Washington—D. C., that is.

"It's a very nice city but it's laid out kind of funny—one of the hardest cities to find yourself in. And may I make a suggestion? I've heard a lot of tourists make it.

"Buildings ought to be marked. Sure, you can see what they are if you stop and read what's cut in the marble. But going by in a bus . . . You can be right across from the Smithsonian and never know it. There ought to be signs."

The mayors were definitely men with their own minds and with other suggestions, too, such as that of Glenn E. Mace, 55.

He is His Honor of Washington, Iowa, in Washington County in Washington Township and lives on Washington street, and in his town lives "the champion tall-corn grower of the world."

Mayor Nisson

Mayor Kaiser

Mayor Moffett
Washington, Va.

He is a Republican definitely—you shoot Democrats out there with a rifle."

His suggestion, in his words:

"Our population at present is 5880 and we invite—when they move the Capitol—we invite them to move it to Washington, Iowa.

WHAT DOES a mayor of a town, population about 5000, do?

William F. Moffett, 29, answered. He is mayor of Washington, Va., but won't be for long—the town recently elected an all-female slate, though Moffett was not a candidate. He is "a lawyer and a farmer" and as mayor:

"You try to get the streets mowed off."

Mayor Frederick L. Suttle, 57, is the His Honor of Washington, N. J., population about 5000, and 20 miles from where Washington crossed the Delaware—"I am the first Democratic mayor elected in 18 years."

Washington, D. C.? It's the finest capital in the world. I don't see how any American can look at the Lincoln Memorial and not have tears come. Of course, I suppose the people who live here never see it—can't see the forest for the trees."

MAYOR John Henry Kaiser, 75, told the secret of success of his town of 5000, Port Washington, Wis.

"The secret is that the city is 100 per cent unionized—even all the city offices. A lot of little towns are afraid of unions but that is wrong. I'm a businessman myself but what has made our town—I will never backwater on that — is the unions . . . Good wages . . .

"Yes, from what I've seen of it, Washington, D. C., is a very beautiful city . . . But did you know that in Port Washington we have a big chair company known the world over? . . . We have the largest fish restaurant in the United States. . . ."

And then that mayor from Washington, Ga., pop. 3795, with no desire to emulate Washington, D. C.

Not that he really didn't like a lot about Washington.

"I have only one criticism," said Mayor W. A. Slaton. "This is a great town but the politics up here has gotten too thick."

Politics? Suh, a Democrat.

Suh, down in Georgia, you shoot Republicans with a rifle.

D. C. Officials Shift Stand To Back New Law on Milk

Miller's Measure Virtually Indorsed By Health Officer, City Legal Aide

Two District officials virtually indorsed a new milk law for Washington offered by Representative Arthur L. Miller (R., Nebr.) in a surprise turnabout yesterday before the House District Committee.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Ralph D. Quinter, jr., admitted that the District Commissioners violated the 25-year-old District milk law when they voted in 1942 to admit from outside the local milkshed to meet a wartime shortage. He added that unless the law is changed they would have to violate the law again in case of another similar shortage.

Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger admitted that milk has been brought in from States outside the milkshed for eight years, and that no illness or epidemics have been attributed to it.

"You might have to bring milk in again?" asked Chairman Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.). When Seckinger replied affirmatively. Abernethy asked, "Then why isn't the method proposed in the Miller bill better than what we have now?"

"We have no objection," replied Seckinger, "to accepting milk from outside during an emergency."

"Doesn't the Miller bill give some sort of inspection on milk from beyond the local milkshed, whereas now you have none?" asked Abernethy. To this Seckinger gave another affirmative reply.

Abernethy tangled with Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) when the latter brought out that local so-called "independent dairies" were supporting the Miller law.

"Who started all this shouting for this bill?" Smith asked. "Wasn't it some dairies here known as independents?"

Seckinger admitted it was.

"Can you tell me, have they sold milk cheaper when they were able to buy it outside?"

"I think the price is somewhat the same," Seckinger replied.

"Then what's all the shouting? I'm wondering why all the noise, when we have an adequate supply?"

"I didn't start it," Seckinger replied.

To further questioning by Abernethy, Seckinger remarked: "The point is, in an emergency, to get milk in you have to violate the law."

"Let's get that on the line," shouted Abernethy. "That's what Judge Miller wants to know. That's what all the shouting is about."

ON A FRONT PORCH—This gray-eyed fair-haired, 10-week-old baby boy was found in a suitcase on the front porch of the Naylor rd. Nursery, 2305 R st. se., yesterday. He is resting comfortably at Gallinger Hospital. Police are trying to locate the parents

Zoning Change Plan Studied In Montgomery

At least two agencies in Montgomery County are reported to be considering plans to change the 28-year-old ban against operating businesses in residential property or flats in one-family zoned areas.

It was learned that proposals for such change will be offered to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission and to the County Council, which is the final authority in zoning law changes.

The proposals followed a reported crackdown on room renting in residential "A" zones in the county.

Morton Thomas, head of the Department of Licenses and Inspection of the county, whose enforcement of the zoning act relevant to roomers created considerable stir in the county, said yesterday:

"The situation has changed rapidly and there is every prospect that the President and the Governor of Maryland may have to call upon patriotic homeowners to take war workers into their homes because of housing shortages.

"Certainly, Montgomery County will cooperate in any defense move urged by the officials of our Government."

Thomas had been swamped with telephone calls since it was announced Tuesday morning in The Washington Post that he was enforcing the ban against roomers, which had not been enforced for the previous 28 years of its existence.

Widows and elderly women called to tell him that renting a room or two was all that stood between them and losing their homes. Some callers took a chance on violating the new county law against cursing over the telephone.

Police Hunt Abandoned Boy's Parents

A ten-weeks-old baby boy—nameless, but healthy—was in the Gallinger Hospital pediatrics ward last night.

The baby was discovered on the front porch of the Naylor Road Nursery, 2305 R st. se., at 7:30 a. m. yesterday, by Mrs. Benis Richards, a teacher, as she prepared to open the nursery for the day.

A penciled note, written in a shaky hand on blue-lined tablet paper, read:

"The boy is healthy and will not cry unless he is hungry. Be good to him. I tried hard but I just couldn't make it. He is a fine boy."

The baby, who has gray eyes and fair hair, weighs 9 pounds, 12 ounces. He was lying quietly in an old brown, topless suitcase. He was dressed in a white flannel gown and wore a pink wool cap.

Police said a bottle of formula, also in the suitcase, was turning sour. They surmised the child had been left over night. The suitcase also contained a bottle of milk, a bottle of milk of magnesia, extra diapers and a can of evaporated milk.

The child was taken to the Women's Bureau, then turned over to Gallinger Hospital. If neither parent is located he will become the ward of the Board of Public Welfare.

Korean Envoy to Speak

Court Decision May Affect Md. Statutes

The first court decision on what legislation can be enacted legally in off-year special sessions of the Maryland General Assembly may result from a case heard yesterday in Prince Georges County Circuit Court.

Judge Charles C. Marbury took under advisement arguments in a suit attacking the validity of a law enacted at such a session last January. He did not indicate when a decision would be announced.

The act directed the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission to make all water and sewer connections from its lines to private users. Connections had been made by private plumbers under a 1948 act, before which the commission had made connections itself for more than 30 years.

$1,000,000 Deficit Charged

During this 30-year period, the suit alleged, the WSSC built up a deficit of nearly a million dollars.

Under the State constitution, the even-year, 30-day sessions may consider only matters of State finance, general public welfare or considered of "acute emergency."

Five master plumbers within the WSSC's jurisdictional area filed suit June 23 asking that the act be voided, claiming no emergency existed at the time of its adoption.

Yesterday's arguments were on a demurrer filed by the commission in answer to a court order to show cause why it should not be enjoined from making the connections.

The suit also asked that the commission be restrained from making multiple connections, and be required to explain why it has not filed annual financial reports.

Filing the suit through Attorney Louis Lebowitz were Daniel F. Buckley of 3731 Rhode Island ave., Brentwood; G. Leonard Daymude of 46 Detrick ave., Kensington; John C. Dorsey of 4902 Sheridan st., Hyattsville; Raymond C. Freas of 7906 Woodberry dr., Silver Spring, and Edward C. Musgrove of 759 Silver Spring ave., Silver Spring.

Excessive Fees Resulted

They contended multiple connections result in excessive fees. They charged the commission with attempting to use the excesses to cover up the million dollar deficit.

T. Howard Duckett, counsel for the WSSC, agreed that there was no emergency, but maintained the law is in the general public welfare since it affects the health of more than 60,000 families.

Judge Marbury said he would rule only on the constitutionality of the law. If it is held valid, he said, questions of fact will be argued at a future date.

Captaincies Await Three D. C. Police

Lieutenants Scott, Blackman, Tolson Will Be Promoted; Flaherty Remains

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

Three Metropolitan Police officers will be advanced to captain and a fourth will be made captain by position as well as in name under terms of the District's 1951 budget, signed into law by President Truman yesterday.

The promotions, expected to be recommended to the District Commissioners this week, were provided for in the Appropriations Act which calls for captains as head of four detective bureau posts.

Affected are the homicide squad, general assignment squad, robbery squad and missing persons bureau.

To be moved up from lieutenancies are Lieut. Edgar Eugene Scott, head of the robbery squad; Lieut. Harry Blackman, head of the missing persons bureau, and Lieut. Aubrey Tolson, head of the general assignment squad. Capt. Jeremiah Flaherty, head of the homicide squad, is expected to continue in his present assignment.

Capt. Flaherty

Lieut. Blackman

Lieut. Scott

Lieut. Tolson

Supt. Robert J. Barrett originally asked Congress for eight captaincies in the detective bureau, but his request was halved by committee action.

Only other captain in the detective bureau, Robert V. Murray, will retain his present rank and position as assistant chief of detectives.

The budget law provides that the rank of captain goes with the position as head of a squad.

All three officers who are to be promoted already have passed their physical examinations, it was learned.

Captain Flaherty, who attained his present rank in February of 1949, joined the police force in 1922 and the homicide squad 10 years later. He has headed the squad since July, 1941. Under his direction, the homicide squad cleaned up the Catoe killings, put Joseph Medley and Earl McFarland into custody, and solved other slayings.

Lieutenant Tolson joined the force in 1925 and was made a detective sergeant in 1932. He was first to suspect a crime in the drowning of two Washington women, Mary Clayton Wimbley and Wilma Taylor in the C. & O. Canal.

Lieutenant Scott joined the force in 1931, was promoted to precinct detective in 1936 and detective sergeant in 1939. He was raised to a lieutenancy in 1947.

Lieutenant Blackman, who conducts a radio traffic talk, has handled public relations for the department, and served as president of the Policemen's Association.

Mack has been in the public eye as mascot of the 260th Anti Aircraft Division. The census started July 17. Enumerators are able to sell licenses for those dogs that lack the necessary item. A vaccination clinic will be held for the county dogs August 2 at the Silver Spring Armory

Three District Children Die In Unusual Circumstances

Three District children died Tuesday night and yesterday under unusual circumstances. One was found to have lead poisoning. Another died after taking gas at a dental clinic. The third drank kerosene.

A 2-year-old District boy died at Gallinger Hospital at 5 a. m. from lead poisoning possibly the result of eating paint.

The child, Edward White, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. White of 1420 Ames pl. ne., was admitted to the hospital Monday suffering from progressive weakness, lethargy and anemia.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, said the boy had been "sick" several months.

X-rays taken Tuesday disclosed the lead poisoning, according to Dr. Richard Welton, medical superintendent at Gallinger.

Dr. Welton said he learned the child may have eaten paint that had peeled off the porch of his home.

Homicide squad detectives obtained samples of the paint from the porch for the coroner who sent them along with the child's vital organs to a laboratory for examination to determine the exact cause of death.

Pending the laboratory report, Dr. MacDonald is withholding the death certificate.

Betty Gay Moore, 8, of 903 5th st. ne., died in the dental clinic at Children's Hospital after she had been given gas for the extraction of five teeth.

A hospital spokesman said the child apparently died immediately after receiving the gas mixture of nitrous oxide and oxygen.

A staff doctor administered adrenalin and coramine, the latter intravenously, but the child was pronounced dead at 9:20 a. m.

Coroner MacDonald held up a death certificate pending a laboratory examination of the vital organs.

Dr. MacDonald issued a certificate of accidental death for James Owens, jr., 16 months, who died at 10:40 p. m. Wednesday at Children's Hospital from a dose of kerosene.

The coroner said the child drank a quantity of kerosene from a beer can which was on a window ledge in his home at 202 Brooks ct. nw.

Riders to Pentagon From D. C. Don't Pay Way, CTC Man Says

Pentagon riders on Capital Transit lines yesterday were compared to Washington school children by a transit executive; neither fare pays his own way.

J. E. Heberle, vice president and controller of Capital Transit, testifying at an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on the joint-fare system now used by CTC and two Virginia bus lines, made the comparison when he said the two types of fares are "not too dissimilar except in the amount. We get 3 cents from school children and 7 cents from joint-fare users."

Capital Transit, Washington, Virginia & Maryland and the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington lines all are petitioning ICC for abolition of the joint fare. As now constituted, the two Virginia lines receive nine cents to seven cents for Capital Transit of the interstate fare.

Each line wants 15 cents of a proposed 30-cent joint fare ticket for riders from Washington to the Pentagon, Navy Annex, National Airport and Arlington Farms.

Heberle reminded ICC trial examiner H. C. Lawton that Capital Transit began the Pentagon service during the early days of World War II, at the "urgent request" of the War Department.

Heberle said the Capital Transit does not "at this moment contemplate any additional financing."

Heberle, who was on the witness stand throughout the day, said that high taxes, increased passenger carrying cost and falling revenues are among reasons Capital Transit needs more money. He said he did not believe the amount realized by the recent fare increase authorized by the District PUC "will be adequate to meet the needs" of the company.

Under cross examination by S. Harrison Kahn, representing the AB&W line, Heberle said that Capital Transit does not have an ICC certificate for its District operations. Kahn told Lawton that he believes the CTC is operating in violation of the law without such a certificate.

Later, Daryll Myse, CTC attorney, said that the company operates in Washington under a congressional charter granted with the 1933 merger act. He said the transit company does have ICC certificates for Maryland and Virginia operations.

The hearing continues at 9:30 a. m. today.

House Votes More Money For District Crime Probe

Check on Counsel For Investigators Made Stipulation By Funds Group

The House voted unanimously yesterday to give $20,000 more to the District Crime Investigation Subcommittee to continue its inquiry into local crime and law enforcement.

But the crime group's first order of business, it became clear last night, would be to check on its chief counsel, Hyman I. Fischbach.

In recommending approval of additional funds earlier yesterday, the House Administration Committee directed that a letter be sent to the crime subcommittee members suggesting the check.

Explanation by Stanley

Thomas Stanley (D., Va.), acting chairman of the Administration Committee, told reporters the letter would say:

"We have approved the resolution (asking for more money) and that it is the hope and sense of our committee that in continuing the investigation full consideration will be given to the statements, within the subcommittee at the hearing, and that an investigation be made before proceeding to carry out the resolution."

The statements referred to, Stanley explained, were made at a Monday meeting of the Administration's Accounts Subcommittee, when some members raised objections to Fischbach.

Stanley said no member who "thinks there should be a change of counsel has stated to me any direct charges that would justify the removal. I do not think the minutes of that meeting will show any direct charges have been made."

Won't Release Minutes

Stanley declined to make public the minutes of the Monday session.

Stanley made it plain he did not consider his committee's recommendation to check on Fischbach binding.

As he viewed the situation, Stanley said, if the crime subcommittee finds basis for charges against any of its employes, "they have stated they will investigate."

Informed of the Administration committee's action, James G. Davis (D., Ga.), chairman of the crime group told reporters:

"If and when we get such a letter, I will promptly call my subcommittee together and consider it fully."

Consultant's Suit Says Pepco Overcharged U. S. $75,000

An Arlington rate consultant yesterday filed a $554,000 suit against the Potomac Electric Power Co., charging the utility overcharged the Government during the summer of 1948.

Edward A. Leslie, 4438 S. 36th st., Fairlington, asked District Court to force the company to turn over to the Government $2000 for alleged overcharges in each of 202 Government buildings during that period.

Leslie also asked that Pepco be forced to turn over $150,000, double the overcharges which, he said, amounted to $75,000.

Leslie filed suit under a little known statute which permits an individual to sue on behalf of the Government. The law provides that the person shall keep 25 percent of the amount covered, provided the Government does not take over the suit, and 10 percent of the amount recovered if the Government does take over the suit.

Leslie charged in the suit that the District Public Utilities Commission authorized a 3-billion-dollar rate increase for Pepco, effective July 21. He charged that the increase was made retroactive by the company, in that meters read on or after July 21 included some power consumed at the lower rate.

District Court Judge T. Alan Goldsborough recently ruled that retroactive billing by the Washington Gas Light Company after a rate increase was illegal.

Leslie told reporters he is retained as a consultant by large users of electric power and "ran across" the basis for his suit while working for them.

Pepco officials had no comment.

Civic Leaders Hail McKee at Banquet

Sixty-five civic leaders gathered at the Dupont Plaza Hotel last night to honor Jerome B. McKee, president of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations.

McKee, a wholesale liquor salesman with the House of Stover, was given a testimonial dinner by the American Business Association.

In addition to numerous spoken tributes, two dozen telegrams were read. ABA President J. A. Kamerow said McKee had done "an outstanding job at a time when extraordinary leadership was required."

Arthur Glarendon Smith founder of the federation, called him "one of the federation's greatest presidents." Fred G. Fraser, director of administrative services for the Veterans Administration, said McKee was "not afraid to serve his God, his community or his Nation."

McKee received gifts from the ABA, the Restaurant Beverage Association and the Columbia Heights Citizens Association.

A World War I veteran who received a DSC from General Pershing, McKee has held every office in local American Legion circles. He is executive director of the D. C. Retail Liquor Dealers Association, a past president of the Georgetown Businessmen's Association, for 35 years a member of the Knights of Columbus and a Lion. For the past year he served as president of the Federation.

The gathering also heard Representative Donald L. Jackson (R., Cal.), a Marine veteran of World War II, who said he felt "we are in for a long haul in Korea." He is a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

At a business session, Kamerow, chairman of business and civic freedom fair committee, scheduled a meeting for Griday at 8 p. m. in the District Building to ask whether work for the fair should be dropped because of the world situation.

Postlude

Music Flows As Fans, Rain Come and Go

By Paul Hume

It rained all through Handel's "Water Music" last night at the British concert on the Watergate barge.

The trouble was, it kept on raining even when the Water Music was turned off. But it was the gentlest rain possible, and it came and went. So the audience, came and went with the rain. (During the less gentle drops they went under the bridges that close in the seats. When it let up, they came back to the regular seats.)

All this time British Night was fulfilling its purpose, with Clarence Raybould, conductor of the BBC staff conducting, and Leon Gooseens, oboist, as soloist. It was an all-British program, except for Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings.

Few countries can put up as good a musical show as Great Britain. After Handel's famous music, which received the best conducting of the evening, there was a rousing overture. To a Picaresque Comedy, by Sir Arnold Bax. The music has a wonderful bounce. We heard it from under the north bridge, and can report only that the louder measures sounded properly brisk.

Goossens played a thoroughly charming concerto for oboe and strings by Gordon Jacob. Jacob, a professor at London's Royal Academy of Music, is known here for some fine film music. His concerto is well devised to show off every possibility in the realm of oboe technique.

Since Raybould is a conductor who prefers to underscore all he plays, the music came out without emotion, and at times, without adequate vitality. This affected parts of Elgar's Enigma Variations, and most of Barber's Adagio.

Elgar's portraits of a baker's dozen of his closest friends make good listening. Their orchestration is rich and the treatment ingenious.

Walton's second Facade Suite furnished the only gayety except for moments in the Bax overture.

It was on the whole a quiet evening of fine music, played for its own sake more than that of the listeners.

The size of the audience looked encouraging after recent statements by symphony officials indicating the weather has reduced Watergate income to a serious point. Howard Mitchell, conductor of the National Symphony, said, "Well, it's still a very serious problem. If we have a big deficit here, it makes it hard for the orchestra during the winter."

Gen. Booth Memorial Set Sunday

Memorial services for Gen. Evangeline Booth, 84, former international commander of the Salvation Army, will be held Sunday at 8 p. m. at the six Salvation Army Centers in the National Capital Division.

General Booth died Monday at her home in Hartsdale, N. Y.

Maj. George Ribble, divisional secretary for Washington, said yesterday that a black ribbon would hang from the corps' flags on that day to mark "her promotion to glory."

Funeral services for General Booth, 84, will be held at 10:30 a. m. today at the Salvation Armys' Memorial Temple in New York.

The Salvation Army said it had received this message from President Truman on Miss Booth's death:

"A life of unselfish service has come to a close with the passing of Gen. Evangeline Booth, daughter of one of the great religious leaders of the nineteenth century. It was of happy significance that she was born on Christmas Day of the year in which her father founded the Salvation Army, which she served faithfully and well throughout a long life."

A public hearing having been held by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in the matter of closing certain street area and public alleys in the District of Columbia, as hereinafter described, and as the said Commissioners are of the opinion that the street area and alleys referred to should be closed, notice is hereby given that under date of June 22, 1950, they have prepared the following order: ORDERED: That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act, No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the street and alley areas as shown in green color on plats filed in the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia and numbered as Maps 3609, 3610, 3611, 3612, 3613 and 3614, are hereby ordered CLOSED; same to take effect on and after JULY 31, 1950; the title to the land comprised in said areas so closed to revert to the abutting property owners as shown on said maps; the said closings to take effect jointly or separately by subsequent order or orders on the effective date aforesaid, according to Items 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 described as follows: (1) Closing of part of Reno Road, N.W., between Highland Place and Ordway Street; (2) Closing of the east and west public alley and the easterly north and south public alley in Square 1504; (3) Closing of part of Oak Street N.W. east of 17th Street, and providing for a new street dedication for a turnaround; (4) Closing of part of V Street, N.E. east of Bladensburg Road; (5) Closing of part of 36th Street, N.W., south of Prospect Street, abutting Lot 832, Square 1202; (6) Closing of part of

Alice Lyle, Katherine Burt to Be September Brides

White
MRS. ROBERT L. GUY was Miss Hallie McGrady before her marriage yesterday in the Metropolitan Methodist Church. She's the daughter of Mrs. Nannie McGrady of Washington. Mr. Guy's parents are Mr. and Mrs. David J. Guy, also of Washington. The Rev. Edward Latch performed the ceremony and Herman L. McGrady gave his sister in marriage. After a reception at the Kenwood Country Club, Mr. and Mrs. Guy left for Nags Head, N. C. They will live in Chevy Chase, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Patterson Lyle of Washington and Athens, Ga., announce the engagement of their daughter, Alice Louise, to Benjamin Thomas Cockrill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Lacy Cockrill of Memphis, Tenn.

Both Miss Lyle and her fiance were graduated in June with B.S. degrees from the University of Tennessee. The bride-elect was a member of Mortar Board.

Mr. Cockrill is a member of Phi Eta Sigma, Omicron Delta Kappa, Scarabbean and Phi Kappa Phi. During the war he served in the Army in the European Theater. He is now Assistant County Agent for Rutherford County, Murfreesboro, Tenn.

The wedding will take place September 9 at Eldbrooke Methodist Church, Washington.

Burt—McKitterick

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gordon Burt of Hinsdale, Ill., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Katherine, to Nathaniel McKitterick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. McKitterick of Westport, Conn.

Miss Burt is a graduate of Swarthmore College and is with the Defense Department in Washington. Mr. McKitterick was graduated from Yale and is correspondent for Washington McGraw-Hill publications. The wedding is planned for September.

Price—Coffin

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Bodman of Glen Head, Long Island, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Violet Bodman Price, to Edmund Coffin, son of Mrs. William Sloane Coffin of New Haven, Conn., and the late Mr. Coffin.

Mr. Coffin's sister is Mrs. Franklin A. Lindsay of Washington.

Mrs. Price is the widow of William Hoggatt Price, a foreign correspondent for Time, Inc. She was with OSS in Washington, later in London and Paris during the war. Following that she joined the editorial staff of Time in the Middle East and was on the foreign news staff of Life magazine in New York and the Far East until the end of 1949.

She was graduated from Smith College in 1942 and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

Mr. Coffin attended Thacher School and Deerfield Academy and was graduated from Yale in 1943 and the Harvard Business School in 1947. He was a naval lieutenant during the war. His father was one-time president of the board of trustees of the Metropolitan Museum of New York.

McKeever—Kelly

Mr. and Mrs. George L. McKeever of Kennebec, S. Dak., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Shirley Ann McKeever of Washington, to Dr. Timothy L. Kelly, jr., of Brockton, Mass. Miss McKeever is a graduate of Duke University School of Nursing. Dr. Kelly was graduated from Tufts University School of Medicine. The wedding is planned for next spring.

Tyree—Morse

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Tyree of Herndon, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Marie Douglas, to Joseph Everett Morse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Burnside Morse, formerly of Chevy Chase, Md., now of Loudon County, Va.

July Brides

The marriage of Miss Jimmy Louise Fendley to Ensign Richard T. Bailey, USN, took place July 14 in the chapel of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Fendley of Portsmouth, Va., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard P. Bailey of Silver Spring, Md.

Capt. Merle Young, Navy chaplain, performed the ceremony. Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Edmands, USN, the bridegroom's sister and brother-in-law, attended the couple.

The newlyweds will reside in Silver Spring while Ensign Bailey attends the Gunnery Officers' Training School at the Naval Gun Factory. The bride attended Madison College and her husband was graduated from the United States Naval Academy.

Sweeney—McKay

Miss Margaret Agnes McKay and James Sweeney were married July 8 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church. The bride is the daughter of Capt. and Mrs. James V. McKay, USA, (Retd.) of Washington, and the bridegroom is the son of Hugh Sweeney of Donegal, Ireland, and the late Mrs. Sweeney.

The Rev. John Coady officiated at the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at Hotel 2400. The bride was given in marriage by her father and attended by her sister, Mrs. John C. Borky.

Thomas Murphy of Kerry, Ireland, served as best man. Ushering were John C. Borky and Richard D. McCarthy.

After a wedding trip to Atlantic City, Mr. and Mrs. Sweeney will live in Washington.

Georgetown Couple Celebrate 57th Anniversary Fete

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Thomas celebrated their fifty-seventh wedding anniversary on July 9 with open house at the home of their niece, Mrs. Clarence Kelley of Arlington. Mrs. Kelley and four other nieces, Mrs. Alton Cody, Mrs. Gertrude Haight, Mrs. Harry Miller and Mrs. Joseph Feigley assisted in presiding at the tea table.

Some 75 friends called to wish Mr. and Mrs. Thomas well. In the gathering were 6 great-nieces, 9 great-nephews, and 21 great-great-nieces and nephews.

Will Entertain Nuns

The Washington-Baltimore Chapter of the Loretto International Alumnae Association will entertain the Sisters of Loretto who are attending summer school at the Catholic University with a tea to be held on Sunday, July 23, at the home of Mrs. William J. Pate, 4702 River rd. nw.

Copper Plant Boxes Can Be Kept Bright as a New Penny With Polish Made Right in Your Own Kitchen

NOT "bright as a dollar" but "bright as a penny." That's what Mrs. C. A. B. wants her handmade plant boxes to be! She writes:

DEAR ANNE:

A friend has made me three copper plant boxes. They are dull and dingy now. How can I finish them copper-penny bright and keep them that way? Can they be varnished after being polished?

Mrs. C. A. B., Alexandria, Va.

You'll need an abrasive polish for this job, and you can make one yourself by mixing a paste of powdered rottenstone and vaseline or linseed oil. If a stronger agent proves necessary to brighten the boxes, you can add powdered oxalic acid to the mixture in the proportion of one part to six of rottenstone. Using a soft cloth, rub the surface with this paste until it shines. Rinse off under hot running water and dry with fresh cloth.

Spar varnish can be used on the boxes to prevent future tarnishing. This has the advantage of not being affected by water, but may darken with age. Clear lacquer isn't so likely to darken, but may be harmed by water from the plants or oil from your hands if you're not careful. Before applying either, wipe all grease from the boxes with alcohol. Wear gloves in applying the finish to prevent even the touch of bare fingers.

DEAR ANNE:

Would you please tell me where I can purchase Peter Hunt stencils to do some painting in a country kitchen?

Doris P. Fela, Hyattsville, Md.

I haven't been able to find the stencils, but a local paint store has Peter Hunt booklets for sale. These are put out by a large manufacturer, and show you how to do freehand drawings of Pennsylvania Dutch designs. Besides, the store offers five hours of free instruction to anyone interested in learning "Peter Hunting." For more information, dial National 1703.

DEAR ANNE:

I will appreciate it very much if you can advise me of a reliable person or store appraising jewelry and the method of calculating charges for such service.

Mrs. F. F. R., Arlington, Va.

Under "Appraisers" in the Yellow Pages of the telephone book, you will find listed a number of reliable firms which appraise jewelry. The most usual charge for such work seems to be 1 per cent of the valuation of the jewels, with a minimum charge of $2 by some concerns.

DEAR ANNE:

I believe the Chippewa Woolen Mills, Chippewa Falls, Wis., may be the answer for your reader who wants to know about retrieving the wool in old blankets. Some years ago, I heard they would take woolen goods of any kind—blankets, dress scraps, old clothes—and make them into quilt bats. But they didn't weave new blankets with them.

Elizabeth Daggit, Alexandria, Va.

DEAR ANNE:

We enjoy your column very much and wonder if you can help us. My husband has made several drawings with pastels, which we would like to frame ourselves. What is the proper procedure so as to avoid smudging?

Dolores B. Graham, Annapolis, Md.

Art supply stores sell a pastel fixative which will keep the pictures from smudging, but there are two schools of thought about its use. If not skillfully applied — you spray it on — some of the color may be blown off. This has a dulling effect on the pastel. Many artists feel it is better to frame the pastel with a narrow cardboard separator just under the edge of the frame. This will hold the glass away from it and keep it from smearing.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

NEAT trick for keeping jars from "leaking" when you're going a-picnicking is to seal tops on with cellophane tape. It will save your basket and other food from a dousing with mayonnaise, fruit juice, pickles and other food. You can use tape also over salt and pepper shakers to prevent an unseasonable seasoning of your supplies.

Fresh Fruits and Vegetables Are Cooling Summer Foods

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Our food habits change somewhat with the seasons. We fill up on "heating" and energy foods during the wintertime and cut down on those during the summer. We can know pretty well what is proper to eat if we consume, in abundance, the foods grown during the summer season.

We recognize that children do not always have the judgment or discrimination to eat or drink what is good for them, but if left to their own devices will overeat of sweet foods, which are high in energy and heat qualities. They don't need those in hot weather.

In a morning a child may eat two or three sweet cookies, a piece or two of candy, a soft drink, some popcorn, and then cannot be expected to look with eagerness on the nice lunch his mother had prepared for him. This can go on all afternoon, too, so that meals are spurned and the child eats and drinks to appease his appetite and make him "cool" but without giving him the proper balance of food elements.

Guidance Needed

It is well, since children are exposed to neighborhood influences, to lay down some rules about eating and drinking between meals, so as to end the persistent teasing which will drive a mother to give in to end the persecution.

Allow a piece of fruit and all the water the child wants mid-morning. Give some soft drink, or some fruitade in the afternoon. These are not calculated to upset the child's digestion or appetite for his regular meals.

If there are "heating" foods in winter there are "cooling" ones in summer and these are, principally, the fruits and vegetables grown at this season and replete with minerals and vitamins but low in calories.

Dry Cereals Best

Ready cooked dry cereals, because of their lower caloric value, are ideal for summer, while the home-cooked ones can await the cooler weather. Meats should be lean and not highly seasoned, and foods without a high fat content will contribute fewer heat and energy units.

Keeping children both well and comfortable depends in large part in dressing them lightly, bathing them frequently, giving an abundance of water and fruit juices between meals and properly balanced but cooling foods at mealtimes.

BEET CUP SALAD:

Ingredients: 5 medium-sized cooked beets, very finely diced celery, 3 tablespoons broken walnut meats, mayonnaise or creamy-type salad dressing, salt and pepper, crisp lettuce leaves or other salad greens.

Method: Cut a slice from end of beets so they stand well; scoop out centers from stem ends, leaving thin walls. Finely dice removed beets and mix with an equal amount of celery. Moisten with mayonnaise or creamy-type salad dressing, season with salt and pepper and fill beet cups. Serve on lettuce or other salad greens. Makes 5 servings.

Women in Few Top U. S. Jobs, Survey Shows

By Nicha Soure

IF YOU are striving for a high-salaried position in the Government, and you're a woman, your chances aren't good.

That's the conclusion reached after reading "Women in Federal Service," a report by Florida S. Miller, director, U. S. Department of Labor's Women's Bureau, to Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin released today.

If you run your finger down the Government registers listing top administrative officials of all Federal agencies in 1947, you find that only 3½ percent are women.

But the report shows there was some progress made in the last 22 years. From 2.4 percent in 1925 the proportion of women in top administrative jobs grew to 3.5 in 1947.

Although the percent of women top administrators remained at a standstill (3.5 from 1941 to 1947) the proportion of women in the lower grades of work increased from about 20 percent in 1941 to 24 percent in 1947.

Well Trained

WHAT is the upper bracket Government woman like? A composite picture shows that half of the group are 45 years old or older when they reach their highest reported salary. Seven out of eight are college graduates and three in five have additional advanced degrees.

In most cases the women who receive salaries of $8000 or over (only 32 in the 730 women studied) had considerable training and long periods of experience before entering the Government. (True, there were some who had entered the Government as young women without college training and with little outside experience and through long years of service had climbed to their top-level positions. But these were few and far between.)

Economists Lead

OF THE 730 women studied, over 100 were classified as economists. This was the largest group of women in one field reported in the study. Of the more than 50 social welfare workers included the majority were either in the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department or in the Federal Security Agency. About 80 percent of this group had less than 10 years Federal service which reflects the recent expansion of the Government in this field.

Most of the 35 home economists reported in the group of upper-salaried women were in the Department of Agriculture.

The over 60 upper-salaried women attorneys and legal specialists studied were more widely scattered through the agencies than women in any other profession. Among others of the approximately 400 women included in the professional group studied were 41 women in the physical or biological sciences, 34 physicians, nurses or specialists in some phase of public health work, 30 workers in the field of education.

Skip the Trimmings in Summer Slimming

By Ida Jean Kain

SQUARE MEALS are notorious for making round waists . . . so for summer slimming we'll simply trim off the fat corners and streamline the menu. It's quite easy, once you take a stand against them and they get the knack of leaving off the fat trimmings and the accessory carbohydrates.

IDA JEAN KAIN

Take sandwiches for example. They are satisfying summer fare and very popular. They may be safely included in a reducing menu provided the bread is sliced thin, and such fats as butter, margarine and mayonnaise used very sparingly, if at all. One trick is to have the butter soft . . . it spreads farther and thinner. Using mustard instead of mayonnaise is a calorie saving. Eggs deviled with a bit of mustard and seasoning are delicious and low in calories.

Eliminate the Sauces

TRIMMINGS and calories can be deleted all through the menu. Sauces are not needed on vegetables in summer, for fuel anyway. And since seasonal vegetables are flavorful when they are cooked quickly in a small amount of water, they do not need the addition of butter or a sauce.

When in doubt as to whether or not a food is high in fuel calories, answer this question: Is it greasy, and does it taste oily? If it does, then the calories are solidly packed her ounce . . . and very warm for July. The rule is to go light on all fats . . . mayonnaise and salad oils, table fats, cream and whipped cream, and avoid the fats of meat and gravy . . . and cut calories fast. It makes it a pleasure to delete these when you know you are slashing calories 2¼ times as fast as you could by leaving off any other food nutrient.

Tricks for Sweetening

WHEN A FOOD tastes very sweet, there is good reason to suspect its calorie content. There are tricks to use in sweetening cold beverages . . . add the sugar while the tea or coffee is hot, less sweetening is required. Also it is a good plan when sweetening is added to berries to do so right after they have been washed, then allow them to stay in the refrigerator for a couple of hours. They taste delicious in their own juice and no cream need be added.

Saccharine or the new sweetening product called Sucaryl can be used in place of sugar. Both are synthetic noncaloric sweeteners. In using a sweetener of this kind for cold beverages, it should first be dissolved in the hot liquid. For sweetening fruits, the tablets can be crushed and sprinkled on. Sucaryl has been approved by the Pure Food and Drug law and is now available at drug stores. It is heat stable and can be used in cooking.

Just watch the trimmings in summer fare, and you can dine well on surprisingly low calorie menus.

Be Proud of Your Home Selections

Accessories in your home reflect you and your taste more than furniture or color.

Even the smallest ash tray should be something you're proud to put on display, says Better Homes & Gardens magazine.

Lamps are your most-noticed accessories. Make sure their lighting is as good as their lines. And mix floor lamps with table lamps for variety. A different shade can give the base new style.

Pictures keynote your color scheme while they bring grace and beauty to your rooms. Mirrors catch and reflect the light and color from other parts of the room. Both pictures and mirrors should hang at an average eye level, close to a furniture grouping.

Your hobbies and handicrafts will add a personal touch to your home. Be sure to display them where they'll be noticed. And if you have a green thumb, play it up. Flowers will help carry out your color scheme; trailing greenery will soften the lines of a shelf or table.

Figurines, book ends, vases—all the small bric-a-brac around your living room: these are the finishing touches that give your room distinction, make it truly yours.

Take stock of what you have and then experiment. Use color, texture and period to unify groups of accessories. Make sure each small group blends into the room.

Rash of Parties Breaks July Lull

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

IN THE RASH of mid-summer parties which broke into a somnolent July schedule yesterday, the gayest perhaps was the dance at Mrs. Rowan Shevlin's Federal period Georgetown house.

Three hosts and a hostess greeted the guests, for Mrs. Shevlin had combined with Elim O'Shaughnessy, Wayne Jackson and Charles Bartlett for the fete.

Vice President and Mrs. Alben Barkley, who were honor guests at Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock's dinner before the dance, had foregone the pleasure of the late date to listen to President Truman's radio address. Also in the group dining with the Krocks were the British Minister and Lady Hoyer Millar, Senator and Mrs. J. William Fulbright, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Elim O'Shaughnessey, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Schoenfeld, and Benjamin Kittredge, in town for the day. Mrs. Philip Graham was also among the dinner guests and Mr. Graham joined her at the dance.

After-Concert Party Honors British Artists

THE BRITISH Ambassador, Sir Oliver Franks, was among the guests at the after-concert party given last night at the home of Nigel Gaydon, First Secretary of the British Embassy. Hosts were members of the British Information Services which is headed by P. H. Gore-Booth, who is away.

Honor guests were the British guest conductor Clarence Raybould and Oboist Leon Goossens, who played with the National Symphony Orchestra last night at the "British Night" Watergate Concert.

Among those asked to the reception were Speaker of the House, Sam Rayburn, Senator Margaret Chase Smith, Commissioner John Russell Young, and Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Calloway, Mr. and Mrs. David Edward Finley, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hayes, and several members of the British Embassy staff.

St. Andrews Society Fetes British Naval Staff Chief

ADMIRAL Sir Frederick Dalrymple-Hamilton, retiring head of the British Naval Staff in Washington, was feted at a farewell cocktail party and buffet supper last evening given by members of the St. Andrews Society. Admiral Sir Frederick is also a member of the organization. The party was held at the Columbia Country Club with P. Y. K. Howatt, president of the society, the host.

Lady Dalrymple-Hamilton, now in Flat Rock, N. C., will return to Washington on Tuesday.

Bride-Elect Kept On Party Round

BUSY as a bee is Miss Leila George Luening, whose marriage to John Lindsay King, jr., will take place Saturday, July 22, at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. The bride-elect, daughter of Mrs. William G. Biederman, has been guest of honor at parties given by Miss Byrd Bland Smith, Mrs. J. H. Green of Falls Church, Mrs. W. Ridgely Chapline, Miss Jean McDonald, and Mrs. M. Berman.

Sour Mashers Serenade Miss Dunn and Fiance

MISS AGNES DUNN, bride-elect of Lawrence Cutting Dalley, jr., was feted last evening by fellow club members of her fiance known as the Sour Mashers. Each week the Sour Mashers, numbering nine, meet to sing informally. Last evening the group met at the home of John M. Kauffmann, and rehearsal time was turned over to serenading Miss Dunn.

In the vocal group were Jack Nevius, Louis Hood, Anthony Hass, Robert Schmertz, the host, the prospective bridegroom, William Culbert, William Koplowitz, and Arthur Nichols.

Luncheon Honors Senator Pecson

HOWLAND H. SARGEANT, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs, was host at luncheon yesterday at the Carlton, entertaining in honor of Senator Geronima Pecson of the Philippine Senate and member of the executive board of UNESCO.

Other guests were Emilio Abello, Philippine Minister; Durward V. Sandifer, Richard R. Ely, Charles Thomson and Cyrus Peake of the State Department; Miss Dorothy Fosdick, Miss Sigrid Arne. Solomon Arnaldo and Miss Ruth Bacon. Also Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Miss Malvina Lindsay, Dr. Rayford Logan, Miss Selma Borchardt and D. Zuckerman.

NEWPORT NOTES: B. K. Nehru, Financial Counselor of the Indian Embassy, and Mme. Nehru are visiting Frank S. Brainerd at Sea Cove, Price's Neck. With Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bruguiere at Wakehurst are Mrs. Bruguiere's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Saunderson from California.

Netherlands Attache Th. van Hemert and Mrs. van Hemert announce the birth of a son, Theo Maarten van Hemert, on July 12 at Sibley Memorial Hospital. Mr. and Mrs. van Hemert also have two daughters, Cornelia, age 6, and Anita, age 4.

Harris & Ewing

MISS GEORGIA GARRARD McMAHON, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Frederick McMahon, will make her bow at a tea dance at the Carlton Hotel on Saturday, December 23. The bud was just graduated from Principia School in St. Louis, Mo., and in the fall she will enter Holton Arms Junior College. She is spending her summer as counselor at Camp Newfound in Harrison, Maine

CELEBRATING the 102d anniversary of the Seneca Falls women's convention are (left to right) Representative Katherine St. George, Representative William T. Byrne and Mrs. Cecil Norton Broy. Representatives St. George and Byrne were speakers at the National Woman's Party rally yesterday

Rep. St. George Says:

Equal Rights Action Needed on Local Front

REPRESENTATIVE Katherine St. George said yesterday she sees little hope for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment by the Eighty-first Congress, and doubts if it will get by even the Eighty-second Congress. But she did offer a plan which might assure its eventual enactment.

The New York Congresswoman, who is sponsor of the amendment in the House of Representatives, spoke at a rally of the National Woman's Party, stanch supporter of the amendment. The meeting, held in the garden of the party headquarters, celebrated the 102d anniversary of the women's convention in Seneca Falls, N. Y.

First step in the Republican Congresswoman's plan would be to enlist a sponsor for the bill from the majority party. "I hope I will have the honor of remaining sponsor," she said laughingly.

Next, she advised a more localized campaign within separate congressional districts. Chief enemies of the amendment are labor unions who would suffer from the new equality, she said. Women would receive equal pay for equal work under the amendment, she explained. The localized campaign should be aimed at this opposition, she maintained.

The amendment is in a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee. It has already been passed by the Senate.

Representative William T. Byrne of New York, who shared the speaker's platform with the Congresswoman, also advocated more campaigning for the amendment in the home districts.

"You must start at the top. Instead of asking persons in Congress to vote for the amendment, contact the voters who put the persons in power," he suggested.

Following their speeches, the traditional "laying of the roses" ceremony took place in the hall of the headquarters. Members placed rosebuds at the statues of Lucretia Mott and Elizabeth Cady Stanton, leaders of the women's movement, launched 102 years ago.

Chevy Chase Pen Group Honors Mrs. Alice Hurst Garvey

Mrs. Alice Hurst Garvey, past president of the Chevy Chase Branch of the National League of American Pen Women, was guest of honor at a luncheon on July 14 given by members of the branch at the Shoreham Hotel.

Praise for her leadership was given by Dr. Margaret Hayes Sebree, former president of the league, and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the branch.

During Mrs. Garvey's tenure of office, the Chevy Chase Branch opened the door for better cultural relations among its members with many of the Latin-American countries.

'Miss Mabel' Wafts Into the Olney

By Richard L. Coe

"MISS MABEL," which Lillian Gish is getting ready for Broadway out at Olney, is a pleasant little evening in the theater.

What its future on that rugged, diamond-flecked trottoir will be should have nothing to do with your enjoyment of this gentle comedy about a sweet lady who murders her sister to help her friends.

This is not to say that the play is perfect. There is a too-long and uneventful third act that you wish Author R. C. Sherriff (the "Journey's End" man) had worked over and some of its surprises are not exactly surprises. It is inconsequential and does have its pat moments and familiar characters.

But "Miss Mabel" is, praise be, something new, it does hold your interest if not always your patience and while you may hope for a trick ending to liven up that third act, the whole point about "Miss Mabel" would be lost if, in movie style, she nosed out Fate at the finish.

The story—and it would be a shame to reveal too much of it—concerns a popular middle-aged lady whose unpopular twin sister had died leaving a will which will greatly benefit the better folk of her village. All are surprised to be beneficiaries. Gradually, the doctor, the gardner, gardener, the vicar and his wife, a young man and his girl discover some undeniably shady things about that will. A London lawyer insists they obey their individual consciences and get at the mystery which seems to be hidden away somewhere.

How each reacts to the developing tale of the live sister is the meat of Sherriff's very good second act. It allows all the actors amusing moments and keeps you well on the side of Miss Mabel, hoping she will pull off her charity. The third act shows you how, but faithful as it is to the lady's character, it baits you with hope of a trick for redemption which never appears. Had it, "Miss Mabel" wouldn't have been much of a play, but it would have been better theater.

Miss Gish has a pleasant time in the title role, a part enhanced by being talked about while not on stage, which is much of the time. She is a generation younger than Mary Jerrold, the English actress who made the Sherriff comedy into something of a success after playing "Arsenic and Old Lace" for four years.

The general placidity of "Miss Mabel" and the characteristic affection of British audiences for their older actresses, however, make me question whether "Miss Mabel" has an exactly rosy Broadway future. Its production cost in Britain couldn't have been much over $15,000, but they'd be lucky to get this into New York for less than $50,000. Whether so gentle and cool a play can overcome such a hurdle, I doubt.

This aspect, it seems to me, is the real problem of "Miss Mabel," whether a minor, pleasant little piece can make the grade. It certainly isn't worth the $4.80 you'll have to pay in New York, but as unfamiliar summer fare it's likable enough.

The comedy is benefitted by Victor Beecroft as the gnattering gardener, a directed descendant of Shaw's Mr. Doolittle. Beecroft is fine and so is Harry Bannister as the lawyer, desperately trying to uphold his legal status. Marie Carroll has a fine scene as the vicar's wife who seems unable to fathom Miss Mabel's adventure. Charles Francis is smooth as the puzzled vicar and Gwen Anderson charming as the spirited girl. Mark Roberts is the girl's goodlooking young man.

Arthur Sircom directed the production, which Jerome Coray is scheduled to take over for its future summer dates. Syrjela's two settings are, as usual, exactly what the scripts demands.

"Miss Mabel" is pleasant without being in any way exceptional.

"MISS MABEL." Richard Skinner and Evelyn Freyman by arrangement with Alexander S. Ince and Joel W. Schenker present a new comedy in three acts by R. C. Sherriff. Directed by Arthur Sircom. Settings by S. Syrjela. At the Olney Theater through Sunday night.

Godfrey Brain Trust Smoothes the Bumps

Last of Series

By Jack O'Brian

Arthur Godfrey is considered in the entertainment trades one of the smartest administrators since the invention of red tape. Nowhere in his organization, small, tightly controlled, can be found any wasted effort.

His casual, simple approach to his work is sincerely unaffected, but it is the simplicity of complete understanding, of thorough knowledge of his field, of having all the bumps carefully rolled down to a comfortable bowling alley smoothness.

The 46-year-old redhead who is the most popular entertainer of the day, whose microphone meanderings bring 10 million dollars in annual business to the Columbia Broadcasting System, didn't even finish second-year high school.

But—lest his educational defections lead youngsters to believe they can quit school, grab the nearest microphone and emulate Godfrey's success—quickly let us point out that his very lack of schooling almost had him heaved out of the Navy.

Back in 1929, at the U. S. Navy Materiel School, Arthur was confronted by a lieutenant who decided within a few days of Godfrey's enlistment that he had either to learn mathematics or be scuttled from the service. The lieutenant gave Arthur six weeks.

"For a guy who had to take off his shoes to count above 10, it was an impossible assignment," Godfrey said.

Took Mail Course

"I was ready to turn in my bell-bottoms," he added, "when an ad in a magazine stopped me."

Here, it said, was his chance to get special training on virtually any subject — including mathematics. Godfrey hopped to the nearest pen and filled out the blank.

"Within a week I was enrolled in the International Correspondence Schools, studying algebra, geometry and trig for all I was worth."

Came weekend liberty—Godfrey studied. Came a holiday—Godfrey's nose was applied close to the mathematical grindstone.

Won Top Grading

Came the end of six weeks:

"I was top man in the class," Godfrey said.

"Within six weeks I had mastered two years of high school math, thanks to the training I'd gotten."

But he gives major credit to International Correspondence Schools.

"ICS made the impossible easy," he said.

Having thus learned a lesson, he didn't easily forget it. When faced with later crisis, he took his problems where they best could be solved.

Forced to Engage Aide

Finally, when his contractual obligations became too complicated for even his prized ICS mathematics, he knew he had to find some legal and fiscal expert to handle everything on the business side, leaving production and artistic worries to be handled without also having to study double-entry bookkeeping.

C. Leo DeOrsey, a Washington lawyer and close personal friend, loomed as the answer to his mathematical and legal problems.

Arthur considered him then, and even more so now, a combination of Solomon, Einstein, Winthrop Aldrich and the man with the keys to Fort Knox.

Relies on Lawyer

The constant Godfrey battle cry is:

"If you can sell DeOrsey, you've got a deal."

A tough man to sell anything, DeOrsey is equally as tenacious in holding onto the right deal. He hasn't made any mistakes in his Godfrey dealings to date, the redhead points out, and around CBS, as around Washington and Hollywood, he is mentioned with consideration and awe.

Among the other celebrated clients who hew to the DeOrsey fiscal line are Dorothy Lamour, Gen. Omar Bradley, Notre Dame's Frank Leahy, Hollywood Director Mitchell Leisen, makeup millionaire Max Factor—to name but a handful of his varied stable.

Lives on Budget

One week older than 46-year-old Godfrey, DeOrsey handles every financial detail of the redhead's affairs, however small. Godfrey frequently does not know what is going on in the background, and prefers it that way.

Even his personal spending money is doled out on a budget assigned to DeOrsey.

Under DeOrsey's ministrations, Godfrey and the Columbia Broadcasting System recently signed a contract for 12 more years, at the end of which Arthur will retire for good.

"It's the last contract Arthur ever will make for radio or television," DeOrsey said.

"By the end of that contract, he'll have all the money he'll ever need. Matter of fact, he has all the money he'll ever need right now—his needs are that simple."

The load which forces other radio and TV entertainers into breakdowns, into dry periods when they slip badly, is constantly lifted carefully off Godfrey's well-built shoulders.

DeOrsey pointed out that Arthur is concerned only with the programming and whatever operations slip into his field from the others that can't be helped.

The total Godfrey operation is cut into three parts: DeOrsey handles all contractual and financial affairs, big and small.

Has Efficient Helpers

Margaret "Mug" Richardson, since 1934 Godfrey's "good right arm," handles all the dizzy expanse of production, with a staff of a dozen trained personnel.

Michael Boscia, a young man from The Bronx, is assigned by the Columbia Broadcasting System to handle nothing but Godfrey's press relations; and just a brief public acknowledgment of one of the most efficient in his field, intelligent, cooperative, thorough, like everything else I've found on the Godfrey team.

The three handle anything that comes up in each field as it emerges. Consultations are held weekly between DeOrsey, "Mugg" and Mike Boscia. Godfrey is in on any confab he thinks necessary, which is seldom.

Met at Broadcast

"Mug" Richardson has been with Godfrey since 1934, when she was selected "Miss North Carolina." With several other beauty queens, she stopped off in Washington and met Godfrey during a broadcast.

She took a fling at New York modeling, but it didn't satisfy her and she headed back to Washington, where she took Godfrey up on an offer to become his secretary, rather dumfounding him in the process because the original offer was made somewhat with tongue-in-cheek.

Before many weeks had passed, her duties had broadened beyond the secretarial and she started preparing his radio material.

When he moved to New York, "Mug's" value had heightened to a point Godfrey felt he could not do without her. While he is a brilliant ad libber, he must have some notes when he faces a microphone.

Notes, suggestions, poems, news clippings, situations, all are presented in a stream to Godfrey by Miss Richardson during each of his nine weekly broadcasts, telecasts and simulcasts. She keeps close watch on his oral ramblings from subject to subject.

It's not scientific, but neither is Godfrey. It's the best possible way of handling the utterly unpredictable Godfrey and has resolved itself into almost precision planning.

"Mug" is beside Godfrey on every broadcast. When he had the early morning disc jockey shows from Washington and New York she was up at 5 a. m. to get his voice into loudspeakers promptly at 6.

Now she gets to the CBS studios at 8:30 to prepare for the advent of the boss at a few minutes before his broadcast at 10:15.

Last week there was general consternation when she simply failed to show up at all.

"Mug" took it in her composed stride. No Godfrey activity puzzles her any more.

She simply shifted Godfrey's spiels to Tony Marvin, the announcer of all his shows, and they got through as well as could be expected without the casual geniality of the master.

His fans in the studio were disappointed, volubly, and undoubtedly so were his a. m. segment of 40 million persons who bend their ear loyally to him each week, the greatest number of listeners in the history of the spoken word.

"Mug" handled everything just as she always does, with ease, dispatch, without worry or bluster, the kingpin of Godfrey's loyal little band of well-paid followers.

Austrian Musician Barred From U. S. Demands Apology

London, July 19 (U.P.)—Austrian musician Joseph Krips arrived today from the United States and immediately demanded an apology from United States officials who refused him admittance.

Krips, conductor of the Vienna State Opera, wrote a letter to the American Immigration Department protesting the exclusion after he arrived by air from New York.

He disputed United States immigration authority's statement that he refused to wait on Ellis Island until his case was considered and said he was told he could leave willingly or be deported and barred from the United States forever.

Krips, who was scheduled to conduct the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, also protested to Austrian Chancellor Leopold Figl.

Krips said John Erhardt, former American Minister to Vienna, facilitated his trip to America, getting him his visa in one day.

More Police Sent To St. Louis Pool After Race Clashes

St. Louis, July 19 (U.P.)—Additional uniformed police were sent to Fairgrounds Park late today where several minor incidents between whites and Negroes followed a Federal Court order ending segregation in municipally-owned swimming pools.

The city's two outdoor pools were thrown open this morning to all races in accordance with the order. Officials instituted segregation of sexes, however.

It was women's day to swim at the Marquette Park pool, but only three white girls took advantage of it. There were no Negroes. Normal attendance at the pool is about 600 daily.

Civitan to Visit

The Civitan Club of Washington, sponsors of Camp Mawavi, the Camp Fire Girls' installation near Tringle, Va., plan to make an annual visit there on July 23. The seven to 18-year-old campers will be hosts to the Civitans and their families.

New Novel Attempts At Radio Journalism

By John Crosby

CBS and NBC have both come up with almost identical programs aimed at solving crimes which are still open cases and at apprehending criminals still at large. Both those programs, NBC's "Wanted" (10 p. m., WRC, Friday) and CBS's "Somebody Knows" (9 p. m., WTOP, Thursday), are, so far as I know, novel, though rather belated, experiments in radio journalism.

Both programs review actual unsolved crimes, providing listeners with as much information as possible about the suspects in the hope that some listener may come forth with tips leading to the capture and conviction of the criminals. The networks would be performing a great public service if they landed any criminals. So far, neither of them has. Even if they don't, these are both highly educational programs, furnishing the average laymen with sound information on the workings both of the underworld and of the law-enforcement agencies.

$5000 Reward

"SOMEBODY KNOWS," which offers a $5000 reward if you can put a finger on any of these criminals, recently took up the case of a psychopathic killer operating in St. Paul. It opened with the voice of a Dr. Hathaway, a professor of psychology, addressing a seminar on mental abnormalities and speaking specifically of the repetitive nature of criminal acts by various types of psychopaths.

This led into the review of the case of a girl named Geraldine. Geraldine was returning home from her job shortly after midnight on a rainy night. She was within two blocks of her home—a fact established by the bus driver who let her out there—when she was attacked and killed. Her body, the throat and wrists slashed, was found three miles away from the scene of the crime. The girl was neither raped nor robbed.

Dr. Hathaway, who was called into the case by the police, predicted that the killer would strike again if the same set of circumstances arose again. sure enough, about a year later, a girl named Mary Agnes was returning to her home alone from an evening at the ballet about midnight. The circumstances were almost identical. She was within three blocks of her home—a fact verified by the streetcar conductor. It was a rainy night. The streets were deserted. Mary Agnes was killed in the same manner as Geraldine, throat and wrists slashed, and her body was discovered miles from the crime scene.

There was no direct evidence linking both crimes to the same person, but Dr. Hathaway drew up a list of 21 points of similarity and concluded with what he described as a "personality portrait" of the killer. The criminal is still at large, and, Dr. Hathaway warned, he will strike again under the same set of circumstances.

No Action on This One

"WANTED" is a somewhat different proposition.

Its producers, Walter and Peggy McGraw, toured the country for months collecting the voices on tape of police officials, newspapermen, district attorneys, prison officials and witnesses involved in some of the Nation's most spectacular unsolved crimes. No actors are used on this one at all. The actual persons simply retell what they know of the crime. Each week an underworld character, kept anonymous for his own protection, gives tips on the habits, appearance and associates of the wanted man.

Both programs employ almost a magazine rather than a dramatic approach, avoid sensationalism and stick to the facts, which, after all the crime nonsense on the air, you'll find enormously refreshing.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

"The Life You Save May Be Your Own"

Did you know that if you take your eyes off the road for "just a second" at 40 miles per hour you're "driving blind" for a distance of 58 feet?

HOW LEO STRUCK IT RICH

Publicist Leo Farrell tells a wonderful story about a barber named Henry he once knew down in Atlanta.

Henry was habitually out of money. One day he asked Leo to lend him two dollars, on the promise that he'd pay back three dollars on Saturday.

Leo made the loan, knowing full well that he'd never be repaid. "You be sure to be here on Saturday," said Henry, "and I'll have your $3 for you."

Saturday came around right on schedule, and so did Leo. But Henry was distraught as he confided:

"Things have been a little slack this week. If you'll let that $3 go until next Saturday, I'll pay you five for it."

Leo solemnly agreed to the new bargain, but Henry's working capital failed to improve. The debt went over for another week, wth a maturity value of $8; then still another week, and it was up to $10.

Some three years later, it had risen to $272,000.

Encountering Henry in a pool parlor one day, Leo said: "I'll tell you what I'll do, Henry. I'll play you one game of pool for the whole thing, double or nothing."

Henry's inherent caution struggled manfully with the delightful prospect of wiping out the debt

Finally, he shook his head and said: "No, Mr. Farrell, I don't think a poor old barber like me ought to be playing for that much money. Let's play for something reasonable."

"So we played for $5000," Leo recalls. "The lucky stiff beat me, and for the past 20 years he's owed me only $267,000. But just think how close I came to losing all the rest of that money."

I BIT AGAIN

My 14-year-old relative continues to lead me a merry chase through his cornfields. I know why firemen wear red suspenders. It's to keep their pants up. But when he asked "how do you get down from an elephant's back?" he had me stopped cold.

"Silly," he crowed. "You don't get down from an elephant's back. You get down from a duck."

Why am I such a sucker for these things?

GIVE-AWAYS

"Lovely black mother cat and five adorable 5-week-old kittens." (Shepherd 3765.)

"Healthy, affectionate kittens." (Sligo 2992.)

"Small, pretty kitten, gray-white." (Columbia 8954, evenings.)

"Will deliver lucky 7-week-old kitten." (Sligo 3243.)

"Male golden hamster." (Falls Church 6265.)

"Adorable, playful black cat." (Sligo 6907 after 5:30 p. m.)

MISCELLANY

Our recent baseball quiz brings this rejoinder from Nate Leiderman of 1508 41st st. se.: "A pitcher can also get five consecutive strikes on a batter without retiring him. Use the start of your own solution (two strikes, runner caught off base for third out, then two more strikes in top of next inning to same batter) and add the fact that the catcher drops the third strike and the batter reaches first safely." He's right. It still counts as a strikeout. . . . Jayne Greene of 2140 N st. nw. says she doesn't want the crossword puzzle made any easier, but can't they give some better definitions? "Memorial service for the dead" recently turned out to be "obit," and "stand" was supposed to make you think of "last." . . . James D. Bligh, jr., president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, tells me the Jaycees will be happy to have me serve as a judge in the finals of the Miss Washington Contest on August 14. The only truthful reply I can make is that if I'm still in Washington on August 14 and not started on my vacation yet, I'm going to be the unhappiest beauty contest judge in history. . . . Latest radio poll here shows WTOP with 65 percent more listeners than any other station in town. Manager John Hayes is worried; he thinks it should be 100 percent. . . . Mrs. R. M. Hughes of 5158 H st. se. suggests that the American Flag over the 13th Precinct Police Station needs replacing. . . . Unusual neighborhood note: Mrs. Verona Ruhl of 6916 New Hampshire ave., Takoma Park, Md., sings the praises of her neighbor at 6914, Mrs. Lillian Zugby, whose boys are brought indoors to play quietly when it's time for small children in the area to take their afternoon naps. . . . Janet Hockman of 5924 9th st. nw., wonders if there's a story in the season's most intriguing classified ad: "Single woman with cocker spaniel desires transportation anywhere during July or August." Obviously not the fussy type.

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

Mrs. D. G. Schmidt of 1230 Ulster st., Denver, Colo., thinks District Liners will be interested in this item, which we reprint in its entirety from a Denver newspaper:

"More than one and one-half persons, visit Washington, D. C., annually."

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

John B. Kunz of 1852 Monroe st. nw. gets a chuckle out of the recent movie ad that read:

"'The Shipper Surprises His Wife' with Robert Walker."

SUSIE Q.

"All right, I'll take this one. Now show me something for swimming."

15 Nazis Doomed In Mass Murder Of 91 in 1933

Berlin, July 19 (U.P.).—A Soviet sector criminal court today sentenced 15 former Nazi Storm Troopers to death for the mass murder of 91 anti-Nazis in the infamous "Koepenick Week of Blood" in 1933.

Thirteen others were sentenced to life and four were given sentences of from five to 25 years.

All were charged with crimes against humanity during the week of June 20-26, 1933.

ICC Allows Charges For Redeeming Tickets

Nine Eastern railroads were authorized yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission to charge for redeeming unused or partly used tickets.

The charges will be from 10 to 25 cents and may be put into effect any time after July 29. The railroads said they would not be made where inability to use tickets was the fault of the railroads.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Censorship Seen in Newsmen Ban

By Drew Pearson

General MacArthur's banning of newspapermen from Korea emphasized what the American public probably has not realized—namely that there has been virtual censorship over American newsmen in Japan for some time. Unlike news out of Germany, which has not been censored, MacArthur has constantly rowed with American newsmen over their right to report what was going on in his area.

Pearson

One of the men who was at first barred from the Korean front last week, Tom Lambert of the Associated Press, previously had signed a long protest to the American Society of Newspaper Editors complaining of MacArthur's censorship. Others signing the report included representatives of the New York Times, National Broadcasting Co., Time and Life magazines.

They pointed out, among other things, that a newsman "who had written stories which occupation officials considered critical . . . had his home raided by the Army's CID and that he—the correspondent—was subjected to interrogation and threats."

They also pointed out that whereas "the government section (of the occupation forces) actively encouraged correspondents to expose misappropriations of Japanese military supplies, G-1 and G-2, which had classified information relating to the matter, took exception to the resulting stories and efforts of reprisal were taken against at least one correspondent."

"Stories on the purge," the censorship protest continued, "including many facts supplied by G-2, caused their authors to be branded personally by General MacArthur as among the 'most dangerous men in Japan.'"

Observers are now wondering whether MacArthur's censorship may not have caused not only the American public but perhaps the general himself to get the wrong view of what was happening in Japan and Korea. It was following MacArthur's assurance that he could "guarantee" success that President Truman made his fateful Korean decision. Obviously, MacArthur himself was not fully informed at the time he said this.

Capital Capsules

No more politicking—President Truman has now junked plans for a whistle-stop campaign this fall. He was scheduled to go to California, stopping to help various Democratic candidates enroute, but the war crisis has changed everything. The President will now stay close to Washington, will make almost no trips unless the war situation vastly improves.

War powers—Senators Taft and Bridges have made independent surveys to see exactly what war powers the White House has left. These surveys indicate that Truman still has the power to allocate scarce raw materials, such as rubber and steel; so Republicans plan to go over Truman's request for war powers with a fine-tooth comb. They will grant him more powers, but only after considerable debate and a lot of nagging.

Hidden Russian navy — It is now learned that Russia has a much larger navy than we ever suspected. The surface ships have been hidden in the Black Sea, while the subs are chiefly in the South Pacific and Baltic. The thing that worries U. S. war chiefs most is that a Russian sub might sink an American troop ship—which would be another sinking of the Maine and mean world war.

Truman's public relations—White House advisers admit privately that the President's public relations are extremely bad. Some people blame this on Press Secretary Charlie Ross, but those in the know realize that it is chiefly the President himself. Even after being carefully coached, he is apt to make off-the-cuff statements which have unfortunate reverberations. When he announced the Korean decision, Truman missed a great opportunity to go before the public with a fire-side chat explaining the real issues. His failure to do this has led to mediocre morale on the home front and growing isolation in some quarters. He is now trying to make up for this omission.

Stop War Profits

Long before the President's message to Congress, foresighted Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.) had helped draft 56 emergency laws providing for every type of control conceivable. These were drafted by a subcommittee under Senator Hunt, and were to be rushed through Congress at the drop of the first Russian bomb.

Despite this network of war controls, however, nothing has been done about the basic problem of taking the profits out of war.

For years, wise old Bernard Baruch has been urging the control of war profits. If you conscript men's lives, Baruch has argued, you must also conscript such less valuable commodities as factories, raw materials, and profits.

However, Congress did not act prior to World War II, and so far there is no proposed law ready for the statute books which would conscript profits in case of World War III.

During World War II, most of the Nation's big corporations rolled up terrific profits, even after deducting the excess-profits tax. However, Bernie Baruch's sage advice still is being spurned.

Senator Hunt's committee is also considering how to replace Congress in case it should be wiped out by a surprise atomic blast.

The Constitution gives State Governors the right to appoint U. S. Senators to fill unexpired terms. However, there is no legal way to replace Congressmen before their terms expire, except by special elections. In an emergency, however, the Government may not have time to wait for such elections.

Legislation for special elections is not yet on the books, though some Senators have urged that it be passed and kept on legislative ice. The idea would be to stockpile legislation much the same as strategic materials are stockpiled—to save time in case of sudden emergency. However, Stuart Symington, the new NSRB chairman in charge of mobilization planning, is against this idea. He would stockpile the plans, rather than the actual legislation. Then Congress could make last-minute changes and keep the legislation up to date before passing.

Note—Symington is one of the few who vigorously favor Baruch's proposal that profits in industry be conscripted as well as men's lives.
